Dwight W. Morrow,
The Pacific Conquered.
They Work, Others Profit.
No Substitute for Sleep.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SUDDEN DEATH ends the useful life of Dwight W. Morrow, a hard-working, sincere American citizen.

Mr. Morrow made his own way in the world and achieved success that would have more than satisfied many when he became an important partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. He relinquished that position, with its great profits, when opportunity presented itself to render service to his country.

He did admirably the work intrusted to him in Mexico, bringing the nations closer together in friendship, acting as a tactful, efficient peacemaker in connection with regrettable religious troubles.

He died with a brilliant career and great honor still before him. His untimely death is a national calamity.

CLYDE PANGBORN and Hugh Herndon, Jr., able American fliers, TRIED and succeeded. Flying the Pacific in 41 hours, a non-stop flight, with only one supply of fuel, the brave men came down at Wenatchee, in the state of Washington, with a crash and a smile. What they had done had never been done before.

The length of their hop was 4,465 miles, and they conquered the wide Pacific. Such an achievement should offset a good deal of pessimistic gloom.

The nation's prosperity and future depends on the minds and hearts of its people. We have the right kind of people.

MANY BUILDING up great fortunes in the United States have died too soon, because they worked too hard. They have little leisure, less happiness.

They are envied, and criticized when they should be thanked. When they are dead they have only six feet of earth, and the worms soon take that. Everything else goes to the public. A Vanderbilt, a Hill or a Harriman builds a great railroad system, permanently improving the country.

A Rockefeller accumulates money by "patience, perseverance and industry" plus extraordinary intelligence, gives hundreds of millions to education, science, warfare against disease, and his son continues the giving, while the father looks on approvingly.

HENRY CLAY FRICK built up the United States Steel business with Andrew Carnegie, built for himself a magnificent palace in Fifth avenue, bought beautiful works of art. His widow has died; the palace and all art works now become the property of the people. He

ATHLETICS BEAT CARDS IN FOURTH BATTLE OF WORLD SERIES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—The Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American League, defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the National League, in the fourth battle of the 1931 world series here this afternoon. The victory gave the Athletics an even break in the first four games.

The score was 3 to 0.

George Earnshaw, star right-hander of the A's, made his second start of the series against the Cardinals.

Manager Gabby Street, of the National Leaguers, countered with Silas Johnson. Bill Hallahan was his original mound choice, but he switched at the last minute.

Jake Flowers was hit in the face in batting practice, but was able to start at third base after receiving medical attention.

The A's got away to a one-run lead in the first inning when Bishop singled, Haas sacrificed and Simmons doubled against the leftfield wall.

FLOWERS TAKEN OUT

Flowers was replaced at third base by Andy High at the start of the second inning.

Earnshaw kept the Cardinals off base until two were out in the fourth inning when Frisch drew a base on balls. He stole second a moment later. Earnshaw, however, ended the inning by fanning Bottomley.

Martin got the first hit off Earnshaw in the fifth inning. He singled to left, after Hafey had been retired. Martin stole second after Earnshaw had fanned Wilson. Gelbert also fanned to end the inning.

Foxx hit a home run over the leftfield stands to score the Athletics' second run in the sixth. Miller followed with a double to right center and scored a moment later on Dykes' single to left. When Williams followed with another single, Johnson was derricked in favor of Jim Lindsey.

SERIES LOSES ITS COLOR

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A lackadaisical crowd, depressed by two straight defeats of the supposedly invincible World Champion Athletics, gathered slowly for another pitchers' battle today as a burning midsummer sun scorched the fourth game of the world series.

For the St. Louis Cardinals, able to gamble now with two victories stowed away against one defeat in the first three games, big Sylvester Johnson, a right-handed relief star, who has earned his right to start a game, was Gabby Street's pitching selection. With no choice but to throw his finest into the fray before the series is lost beyond all hope of redemption, Connie Mack sent "Big Jarge" Earnshaw out to toss his smoke and curves at the rampaging Redbirds from the banks of the Mississippi.

It was a dull setting, in contrast to the brilliance of the brilliance of the crowds and decorations that accompanied the two thrilling duels that opened

'Numbers' Racket Linked With Attack, 2 Held

Jesse Levy, 22, of 1928 Plainview avenue, who, police say, is a "big-shot" in the numbers racket, today was in a serious condition in Homeopathic Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull inurred late last night when attacked by two men at Trade and Beatty streets.

Paul Fine, 24, of 3153 Breckenridge street, and Oscar Rapaport, 22, of 30 Wellsford street, waiters, admit having attacked Levy, police say. Both were released, Rapaport in $1,000 bond and Fine in $500 bond for further hearing before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg.

MORATORIUM EXTENSION PROPOSED

President Calls Leaders of Two Parties to Capita For Advice on Program

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—A two-year extension of the reparations and war debt moratorium will be laid before congressional leaders by President Hoover tonight when they confer with him at a special White House conference.

This exclusive information was revealed today to the International News Service by a high Republican authority, who discussed the matter with the President within the last few days.

SUPPORT ASKED

The President, it is understood, will inform the congressional leaders he meets tonight that he is under great pressure to extend further financial aid to Europe. He will ask their support for a three-year moratorium instead of the one-year debt holiday that they pledged themselves for last June. If sufficient backing for such a program is manifested, the President will then proclaim the new moratorium just as he did the one-year plan.

The President will also make known to the congressional leaders his measures for drastic governmental savings and his plan for unemployment relief. On both he will ask for bi-partisan support in order to avoid a tax increase if possible.

On their part some of the congressional leaders, it is known, will strongly urge the President to convene Congress early next month instead of waiting until December. They will inform him that by meeting a month ahead

CAPONE PLEADS NOT GUILTY

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Al Capone in his low, soft voice entered his formal plea of "not guilty" when placed on trial today by the United States government on the charge of violating the income tax law.

The trial of Capone, one of the most significant court proceedings of the prohibition era in America, opened shortly after 10 o'clock in the commodious courtroom of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. The courtroom was only half filled, for the judge had barred the morbidly curious.

Capone, the underworld king of Chicago, who for years has survived innumerable police clean-ups, reform crusades and grand jury investigations, was figuratively "put on the spot" by Uncle Sam once the trial formally got

World Mourns Morrow; High Tributes Paid

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—There was speculation today as to what effect his passing would have upon politics, and there was world wide appraisal of his accomplishments in finance and statecraft; but dominating all else here was the stunning realization that Dwight W. Morrow, who but a day before had appeared in excellent health, was suddenly dead.

From everywhere, leaders of nations, of industries, arts, finance and religion sent expressions of their grief at news of his death, which occurred yesterday.

In Mexico City, where his most notable diplomatic services were performed as United States ambassador; in Englewood, where his home has been for 30 years; in New York, where he built his fortune with the Morgan interests; and in China and Japan, where his daughter, Anne, and her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh are vacationing, there were equal manifestations of grief.

TOLD OF WEARINESS

A United States senator from New Jersey, a man believed by many to have been on the threshold of even greater political distinction than already had come to him, Dwight Morrow died in his sleep at 1:52 p. m. yesterday. A cerebral hemorrhage was the

EDISON SINKS, DEATH NEAR

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Thomas A. Edison was in a semi-conscious condition today and his death is but a matter of days, his personal physician announced this morning. The physician, Dr. Hubert S. Howe, said that the aged inventor's mental condition was "lethargic."

Although Edison spent a fair night, he refused to eat and this was described as "very bad" by Dr. Howe.

Howe held little or no hope that the 84-year-old inventor would fight off the effects of diabetes, Bright's disease, uremic poisoning and a stomach ailment believed to be gastric ulcers, none of which, the doctor said, had caused Mr. Edison pain.

Lake Rum Flow Cut, U. S. Boats to Leave

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Twelve speed boats, used by the U. S. Coast Guard on Lake Erie when liquor smuggling was more prevalent, will be dispatched Friday to several stations on the Atlantic Coast. Twenty-six guardsmen will be transferred to the other stations with the boats, Commander Martin W. Rasmussen announced.

HOOVER PLANS RALLY STOCKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Prices rallied swiftly on the New York Stock Exchange today on the expectation that an important announcement bearing on economic affairs would follow President Hoover's conference with congressional leaders at the White House this evening.

The rebound was one of the most violent rebounds of the year, numerous prominent issues rising $5 to more than $15 a share.

Added impetus followed announcement of disbursement of the regular $2.50 quarterly dividend by Santa Fe Railway.

Financial circles, particularly the security markets, have been starved for good news and the change in fare offered by today's developments had a quick reflection on spirits.

Early in the afternoon the market learned that President Hoover had also called a meeting of real estate men and bankers for tomorrow. Some reports have said that a large banking pool would be arranged to help out holders of defaulted bonds.

Akron Salutes Pymatuning On First Flight in Penna.

The Akron, world's greatest airship, paid its first visit today to Western Pennsylvania, but failed to include Pittsburgh in its itinerary.

The pride of the United States Navy was paying an unexpected visit to Jamestown, Pa., where it took part in the Pymatuning dam celebration attended by Gov. Gifford Pinchot and other celebrities. During the exercises, the giant airship flew over the site of the dam and dipped in salue.

Soaring away from Akron, on its fifth test flight at 11:37 a. m., the Akron headed at once for this state. Shortly before 1 o'clock it flew over Sharon on its way to Jamestown. On its return trip to Akron, it cruised above Lawrence County and came within a few miles of New Castle. There were 106 persons aboard.

PINCHOT BREAKS GROUND FOR PYMATUNING DAM

WORK ON BIG LAKE GETS UNDERWAY

Thousands Attend Fete Launching Large Project; Notables on Program

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent

JAMESTOWN, Pa., Oct. 6.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today turned over a shovel of earth on a knoll not far from here, the site of the huge Pymatuning dam.

Then, addressing the thousands gathered, he told of the $1,000,000 dam that to hold back the Beaver and Shenango rivers at their source will soon arise.

He spoke of the huge lake with 70 miles of shore line that the structure will create to take the place of a relatively useless swamp. He lauded its conception and paid tribute to the men who made their dreams come true.

THOUSANDS ON SCENE

The project, begun a generation ago, will cover 16,420 acres of Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio land at a cost so far of approximately $2,800,000. The Governor paid tribute to F. C. Brown, Pittsburgher, who secured the Ohio land necessary for the project. He told of its size—approximating Lake Chautauqua in New York.

And thousands of residents of six counties—Mercer, Lawrence, Beaver, Crawford, Venango and Allegheny—as well as distinguished speakers and guests from Ohio joined in the ceremonies.

Erection of the dam will take, it is predicted, about two years.

The ground-breaking ceremonies reached their highlight in the Governor's address. He spoke glowingly of the active workers who for years persisted towards the construction of the dam, and expressed his satisfaction at the terms of the contract, which will leave, he said, a surplus of the $1,500,000 appropriated for improvements of roads, site clearing and other projects.

JOB RELIEF PROJECT

Pointing out that it is one of the unemployment relief items, he added:

"If legal minds decide that the appropriation's act restricts use of the money, I shall recommend that during its forthcoming special session the Legislature pass an act which will

Others on the program were United States Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania; H. P. Chapman, assistant director of highways of Ohio, representing Gov. George White, and Mayor Frank W. Gilbert, of Sharon.

While Gov. Pinchot spoke of the history of the dam, how the appropriation was provided and passed by the last Legislature, and mentioned the recreational and water supply advantages, others told of its industrial benefits.

ADVANTAGES CITED

They explained its value to the proposed Ohio River to the Lakes canal, its huge storage value, a capacity of 74 billion gallons of water, and termed it insurance against floods and drought.

The recreational facilities embody fishing, hunting and all the other facilities of a lake nine times as large as Conneaut Lake.

The value of water to a community was stressed by Gov. Pinchot, who stated that "no community can progress either in industry or in population beyond the limits of the water available." He also pointed out that "Periodical floods in American streams have been steadily increasing in number, but I am glad to say the completion of this project will minimize the danger in your valleys.

"Pymatuning reservoir will be a monument to those who dreamed this dream and made it come true. I am prouder than I can say that it was possible for me to aid them. Posterity will praise our accomplishment."

State Aids Schools Of East Vandergrift

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Oct. 6.—Payment of $12,000 by the State Council of Education to the Board of Education of the Vandergrift High School for tuition of students of East Vandergrift today paved the way for a nine-month term in East Vandergrift.

Overcrowded schools due to the closing of parochial schools here gave rise to fears that a curtailed term would be necessary unless the school's budget was aided by the state.

under way. For if the "big shot" racketeer is found guilty of all the counts in the indictment he is liable to be sent to prison for 32 years and fined $80,000.

ENTERS QUIETLY

Quietly, without any ostentation whatever, Capone slipped into the courtroom 15 minutes before the trial was started. He was accompanied by two deputy sheriffs. They had entered the building through a side entrance to outwit the huge crowd assembled in Adams street.

Capone placed his snow-white sombrero hat on the counsel table. He was calm and self-possessed. He wore a black "pinch back" suit, a soft white collar and shirt, and a black and yellow striped tie. Across his vest dangled a sparkling gold watch chain.

Capone mopped his face constantly with a handkerchief, a characteristic gesture. It was his only sign of nervousness, but any idea that he was fidgety was quickly dispelled when newspapermen surrounded him and began bombarding him with comment. He rather enjoyed the repartee.

When Capone's battery of lawyers showed up, Al sat in the midst of his attorneys and waited. Soon the special venire of 80 men, from whom a jury will be picked, filed into the courtroom and into an adjoining room. Capone, meanwhile, was tapping the table with a pudgy, hairy hand.

HEARS CHARGES

As Judge Wilkerson mounted the bench, court was called to order and the clerk of court, a bald-headed, elderly gentleman arose and called the case of "The United States Government versus Alphonse Capone."

At the mention of his name Capone half rose but quickly sat down. Judge Wilkerson then began reading the indictment against Capone which contains 21 counts, of which six are classified as felonies and two as misdemeanors.

Capone two months ago had pleaded guilty to the indictment in the belief that he had arranged a "deal" by which he would be forced to serve only two and one-half years in jail, a soft rap. But Judge Wilkerson had heard about the reported agreement and balked it, declaring there could be no bartering with a Federal Court. As a result, Capone withdrew the plea of guilty and prepared for the trial which started today.

Capone is accused of defrauding the government through income tax evasion and failure to pay taxes totaling $215,000 on an income of $1,038,654 during six years from 1924 to 1929, inclusive.

After Judge Wilkerson had read the indictment, he summoned Capone before the bench and asked him what was his plea.

Capone stood there, his hands behind his back and in a quiet voice said:

"Not guilty."

And then he walked back to counsel table and sat down.

Vandergrift Bank Fails to Open Doors

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Oct. 6.—The Citizens National Bank of Vandergrift, second largest in the Kiski Valley, failed to open its doors today. The action was taken following a meeting of the board of directors who asked the Comptroller of the Treasury to take charge to protect depositors. Continued decline of bond prices and heavy withdrawals was assigned as the reason. The bank, capitalized at $125,000, had deposits estimated at $1,400,000.

SALE OF TUNNEL APPROVED

Sale of the trackage and tunnel of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad Company to Allegheny County, providing a new traffic outlet to the South Hills, today was approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to news dispatches from Washington. The railroad is to be paid approximately $3,000,000 for the property.

Transfer of the property will enable Allegheny County to erect a new boulevard extending from Fourth avenue, across the Monongahela River, through the Wabash Tunnel, connecting with the Saw Mill boulevard at the south end of the railroad tubes.

SALVATIONISTS REACH $24,722

Workers in the campaign of the Salvation Army to raise $112,500 to continue its work throughout the county during the coming year started out on their third day today.

The campaign, which opened Sunday, is scheduled to close Saturday. Officials of the organization said subscriptions totaling $24,722 have been received to date.

BANKERS URGE FAITH IN U. S. ECONOMICS

Report Declares Credit Is Strongest in World; Distorted Views Created

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—America's bankers today launched an assault on the nation's economic problems.

Criticising critics of the banking structure and pleading for a perspective picture of a serious situation, the economic policy commission of the American Bankers' Association presented its report to the first general session of the association's convention.

The report is not voted on by the convention, but bankers take it to represent the views of financial men and regard it as particularly important at this time.

The report said:

"In common with the rest of the world our country is being forced to face many serious problems, but American credit is still the strongest in the world.

"We hold in this country a large part of the world's monetary gold. It is still fundamentally true that where the gold is, the strength lies.

"We have no doubt that America's indomitable will to conquer will see us through the present difficulties as it has seen us through similar difficulties in the past.

"The facts are that while four per cent of the banks as to numbers, were permanently or temporarily closed in the first eight months of the year, some 96 per cent were not involved and furthermore that only 1.2 per cent of the deposits were tied, which means that almost 99 per cent were not affected.

"It is obvious in view of the foregoing that an exaggerated and distorted view of the banking situation has been created in the public mind by focussing attention solely on the bank failure figures unrelated to the broader situation of which they are but a part.

"It surely stands strikingly to the credit of the banking profession that, during this period, this vast majority of the bankers have so completely, so courageously and so successfully met their difficulties and obligations."

Capone's Brother Granted New Stay

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—While his brother Al went on trial in Federal Court, Ralph Capone today was granted a stay of mandate delaying his arrest until October 20 on a three-year-old sentence to Leavenworth Penitentiary. He was also fined $11,000 when convicted of income tax violations. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted the stay to allow Ralph to file an appeal with the United States Supreme Court.

Gyros Will Land On Postoffice Roof

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The roof of the new $9,000,000 Philadelphia postoffice will be equipped as a landing field for autogiro planes. The surface will be used for air mail planes. Plans will be completed in six months.

BIG PHILA. BANK FAILS TO OPEN

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—(AP.)—The State Banking Department today took over the Franklin Trust Company at Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, and its four branches.

The bank's board of directors, in special session last night, voted to relinquish control, but offered no explanation of the move.

Yesterday the United Security Trust Company at Seventh and Chestnut, with three branches, and the Willow Grove Trust Company closed their doors and were taken over by the state banking officers.

The Franklin Trust Company had capital of $3,000,000, surplus and undivided profits of $7,574,000, and deposits of $22,990,000 on October 3, the last statement filed with the Clearing House Association showed.

SERIES LOSES ITS COLOR

the series in St. Louis. The appearance of President Hoover with his party at yesterday's opening of the three games here added greater interest to the remarkable pitching of Burleigh Grimes and the continued thrills in the play of the Cards' great young centerfielder, "Pepper" Martin.

CARDS' STOCK RISES

The formerly lightly-regarded Cardinals found themselves firmly established as at least even-money favorites to regain the world championship for the first time in five years.

Supporters of the Athletics, after the successive defeats of Earnshaw and Grove, were asking odds in wagering on today's contest, as well as the series. Sideline observers compared the Cardinals of 1931, no wat top stride with the famous Boston Braves of 1914, who also overthrew the Athletics.

The throngs in the lower stands and the sprinkling of early birds in the reserved sections sat in silence as the Athletics trotted out for a lengthy batting drill against the right-hand offerings of Lew Krausse. Dib Williams, the youthful shortstop, who has not been hitting this series, awoke them with a belt into the stands and they livened up considerably as Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Mickey Cochrane went through the daily routine of blasting practice balls into the seats. With the exception of Simmons, who has hit two homers, they have confined their long-distance hitting to their practice sessions.

PACIFIC FLIERS MISS $25,000 TEXAS PRIZE

Will Get Japanese Reward; Plan to Continue on to New York by Easy Stages

International News Service.

WENATCHEE, Wash., Oct. 6.—While their damaged monoplane underwent repairs at the airport, Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn, conquerors of the vast Pacific, today began preparations for a resumption of their eastward round-the-world flight.

The two "barnstorming aviators," who accomplished the first Japan to America nonstop flight, were disappointed this morning when their New York backers informed them they were not eligible for a $25,000 prize which they had believed was offered by Col. W. E. Easterwood, Jr., for a one-stop flight from Japan to Dallas, Tex.

Herndon and Pangborn originally intended to fly on to the Texas city in the belief that the Dallas millionaire offered $25,000 in cash to anyone who could negotiate a one-stop flight between Japan and Dallas.

But, their plans were cast in doubt when they were informed that Col. Easterwood, in Dallas, had denied offering a prize for such a flight this year. With this development, it became probable that Herndon and Pangborn will shortly take off for New York in a flight of easy stages. New York was their point of departure in their unsuccessful attempt to lower the round-the-world flight record.

For being the first in history to span the waters between Japan and the United States the heroic airmen already have won a prize of $25,000 offered by a Japanese newspaper. This, despite a faulty barograph which was discovered in their plane at the end of the 4,615-mile flight.

I. Ozakai, northwestern correspondent of the Tokio newspaper Asahi, said today there was no doubt that the two fliers would receive the prize, although barograph record is customarily required. The barograph on the trans-Pacific plane was found to have made no record.

New Parts for Pacific Plane Shipped by Air

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 6.—(INS.)—A new propeller and landing gear for the record-breaking transpacific plane of Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn were en route to Wenatchee, Wash., today via airline.

A National Air transport plane left here at 9:15 a. m. with the equipment.

The Japan-to-Washington fliers dropped their landing gear in the sea soon after taking off from Japan. Their propeller was damaged when they skidded to a landing in Wenatchee.

Herndon's mother made the arrangements for the shipping of the new parts.

Roosevelt Squanders Cash Of Porto Rico, Todd Says

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Today's newspapers published a letter from former Mayor Roberto H. Todd, to Gov. Theodore Roosevelt, charging the Governor with extravagant and "unlawful" expenditures at his official residence, La Fortaleza.

The former Mayor, who served six terms, was recently legislated out of office under a law sponsored by the Governor and described by Todd's adherents as unjust, asserts that he wrote the letter so that the Governor's "whole record" might be known in view of reports that he is to be appointed Governor-General of the Philippines.

Bills certified by the government auditor he wrote, show the Governor "has been making the people of Porto Rico pay for his family's personal expenses which should have been paid by the Governor himself."

Also, the letter charged the Governor appointed a member of the Senate to attend a convention of the American Federation of Labor at Vancouver, appropriating $1,000 of government money to defray his expenses.

State Urges Mellon Firm To Employ Miners Here

HARRISBURG, Oct. 6.—The Department of Mines in a statement made public today declared employment would be given to 400 idle bituminous coal miners in Western Pennsylvania if the Mellon-controlled Koppers Coke Company would discontinue the practice of bringing to Philadelphia more than 7,500 tons of coal a week from West Virginia for the manufacture of by-product coke at its ovens at Kensington. In addition employment would be given to the train crews necessary to move the freight cars.

The department further said that gas made from this coal is pumped through the company's pipe line, laid and maintained by the Vare Construction Company, into the gas mains owned by the city of Philadelphia, and operated by the U. G. I. Residential coke distributed by the Koppers Company also is displacing Pennsylvania anthracite, Walter H. Glasgow, secretary of mines, said:

"With unemployment one of the major concerns of Gov. Pinchot and the state administration, added significance is given this practice of a Pennsylvania company at a time when the state is burdened by the sinister shadow of a winter of want.

"Vital, from the unemployment standpoint in Pennsylvania, is the fact that, without the expenditure of one additional penny, the residents of Greater Philadelphia, through use of gas and coke made from Pennsylvania bituminous coal, could contribute materially to the relief program in the Keystone State."

PITTSBURGHERS MOURN MORROW, RECALL BOYHOOD HERE

COUSIN TELLS OF YOUTH'S KEEN MIND

Studious Habits Earned High School Graduation At 13; Studied Law Here

The passing of Senator Dwight M. Morrow was being mourned throughout the nation today but particularly in Pittsburgh, where he spent his early life and where he was known intimately by many of this city's business and civic leaders.

Informal eulogies from men and women in every walk of life were being uttered here freely today as the senator's early days in the city were recalled. Those who attended Allegheny High School with the statesman recalled his absentmindedness, his studious and kind manner; fellow workers in the County Treasurer's office are reminded of his ambition; boys with whom he played remembered that he loved his sports but his studies came first.

STUDIED LAW HERE

Senator Morrow was an excellent student, graduating from Allegheny High School when aged 13. He studied law here, attending the Pittsburgh Law School. He was born in West Virginia and came to Pittsburgh when a boy. He later moved to Slippery Rock, Pa.

Senator Morrow was always the student, never the politician, according to two of his cousins living in Pittsburgh: A. H. and C. B. Morrow, with offices in the Oliver Building. The death of Senator Morrow came in much the same manner as did his father's, the cousins recall. Prof. James E. Morrow, who was principal of Allegheny High School, died suddenly.

C. B. Morrow recounted yesterday when informed of his cousin's death:

"He had a keen mind and was graduated from the school at the age of 13. He was too young to enter college and spent three or four years working in the County Treasurer's office before entering Amherst."

Although the family took it for granted that the boy Dwight would become a college professor, he studied law and read huge tomes that accentuated his slight stature, in the Pittsburgh law firm of his cousins. For a time he attended the Pittsburgh Law School.

YISH LAWYER AMUSING

H. Morrow recalls seeing the pective attorney pleading a Commen Pleas Court dur- s period. He describes the mic scene as follows:

recall one day dropping o the court room and finding Dwight pleading his case before a group of oldish lawyers. He was all seriousness, but I had to smile at the picture that young man made. He was standing there, his slight body covered from head to foot with a long raincoat whose collar was turned up around the back of his head. He made a good plea in all the elegance at his command."

R. Frank Bigham, a member of the Board of Mercantile Appraisers, who worked with Senator Morrow almost 40 years ago when the statesman was employed in the office of the County Treasurer, told of young Morrow's capacity for work.

WORKED ON HOLIDAY

On one occasion when there was a rush in the Treasurer's office, Morrow and Bigham found it necessary to work on the Fourth of July. Morrow worked willingly and when others complained about working on the holiday.

When Prof. James E. Morrow was elected the first principal of Slippery Rock State Normal School in 1889 he moved his family to Slippery Rock. At this time Dwight was a boy of 16 and his outdoor hobbies were tennis and baseball. He excelled in both games, being quick and light on his feet. Schoolmates often remarked that had he taken sports seriously he probably could have pushed the holders of records on the track.

Dwight had three sisters in Slippery Rock, Hilda, now Mrs. E. J. McIlvaine, of Meadville; Alice, now a teacher in Turkey, and Agnes, widow of Bruce Scandrett, former Pittsburgh attorney. She now lives in Richmond, Va. His only brother, Jay J. Morrow, graduated from West Point and now is a general in the United States Engineers.

DECLINES AS CANDIDATE

When Morrow was mentioned as a possible candidate for a presidential nomination, he emphatically declined, declaring:

"I look forward with pleasure and with confidence to the opportunity of voting two years from now for the renomination and re-election of Herbert Hoover.

To L. A. MacDonald, an old-time Pittsburgh friend, he was equally emphatic, adding:

"It is of course very flattering to anyone that his friends should tell him that he is a presidential possibility. I am not taking this seriously with respect to myself, however."

Morrow's Career Reviewed in Britain

MANCHESTER, England, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The Manchester Guardian, a leading British journal, devoted an editorial to Dwight W. Morrow today, reviewing his career in the world of finance and diplomacy and pointing out that he had been a presidential possibility.

Condolences Sent Morrows by French

PARIS, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Premier Laval and Foreign Minister Briand today sent personal telegrams of condolence to the widow of Dwight W. Morrow in Englewood, N. J.

Roosevelt Saddened By Morrow Death

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, here for a brief vacation, expressed sorrow today for the death of Senator Dwight W. Morrow.

Mexico, July 7, 1930.

My dear Frank:

Your note of June 23rd came just as I was leaving Englewood for Mexico, and I have not heretofore had an opportunity of acknowledging it.

It was good of you to write me, and Mrs. Morrow and I appreciate very much indeed the congratulations from you and Mrs. Bigham. Mrs. Morrow did not return to Mexico with me, but I am expecting her to join me some time next month.

With kindest regards, believe me,

Faithfully yours,

Dwight W. Morrow

AMBASSADOR MORROW'S LETTER TO A PITTSBURGH FRIEND

HOOVER WON'T ATTEND RITES FOR MORROW

Curtis Representative for President at Funeral In New Jersey Tomorrow

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Vice President Charles Curtis will representt he President and the administration at the funeral of Senator Dwight W. Morrow in Englewood, N. J., tomorrow, it was announced today.

President Hoover found it impossible to leave Washington due to the pressure of government business.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. in the First Presbyterian Church at Englewood. The church seats about 1,000 persons.

The Senator was a member of the church, of which the Rev. Dr. Carl H. Elmore is pastor. It is assumed that Dr. Elmore will conduct the services. The place of burial has not been determined.

Members of the family likewise had not decided whether the body would lie in state.

No announcement was made as to whether the funeral would be public or private.

Mexicans Mourn Morrow as Friend

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Mexico mourned Dwight W. Morrow today as a diplomat, a student of human nature and above all as a friend.

The Senate held a special session to draw up a note of regret to the American Senate.

Gen. Plutarco E. Calles, whose friendship with the late Senator was one of the features of Mr. Morrow's three years in Mexico, and President Ortiz Rubio wired their regrets and sympathy to Mrs. Morrow.

Morrow Death May Cut Tour Of Lindberghs

SHANGHAI, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here tonight on the British airplane carrier Hermes, having been informed en route by wireless of the death of Senator Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father.

The first information which reached Mrs. Lindbergh of her father's death was contained in a message from the British naval radio station here, but she subsequently received, through the American legation at Peiping, a telegram from her mother, announcing the death briefly and suggesting she and her husband make no change in their plans.

Mrs. Morrow's message read:

"Daddy died peacefully today. Don't hurry home."

The Lindberghs motored from the dock to the American consulate, where they will be the guests of Consul Edwin Cunningham.

Met at the pier by Consul Cunningham, Mrs. Cunningham and other American and Chinese officials, the Lindberghs disembarked from a motor launch in a pouring rain. Mrs. Lindbergh was visibly upset, but was bearing up well and accepted the condolences of the Cunninghams and others with deep feeling.

Col. Lindbergh, approached by newspapermen concerning his plans, said with utmost politeness:

"I must beg to be excused from making any statement at present."

"I am sorry, gentlemen, that I cannot discuss our plans since we have decided nothing ourselves. News of the Senator's death was a tragic blow."

His first act upon disembarking was to go to the American Consulate to send a cablegram to the United States, and he indicated he would make no definite plans until a reply was received.

cause of death. He was 58 years old.

He had retired in good spirits, although over the week-end he had complained somewhat of being tired. Three physicians and members of his immediate family were at his bedside when death came. His secretary had become alarmed two hours earlier when efforts to arouse Mr. Morrow failed. He never regained consciousness.

His rule in life, from the time he attended Amherst College as a classmate of Calvin Coolidge, to the time of his death, when he had already achieved fame, riches, position, honor and the regard of his countrymen, was "don't take yourself too darned seriously." That was his answer to friends urging him for the presidency.

HOOVER'S TRIBUTE

President Hoover, attending the world series game at Philadelphia, was not told of Senator Morrow's death until he was about to return to Washington. Later the President said:

"The country has suffered a great loss. His loyal and generous character as a neighbor and a friend; his public spirit as a citizen; his services during the war; his accomplishments as ambassador to Mexico; his unique contribution to the success of the London naval conference, are the record of that sort of an American who makes our country great."

Thousands of messages of condolence came to the Morrow home on the outskirts of the city. Many hundreds of friends journeyed to the home to express personally their grief.

LINDBERGHS GET NEWS

A police guard was posted about the Morrow estate last night as the crush of visitors continued to grow. Only members of Congress, New Jersey state officials, banking associates of Mr. Morrow and his own circle of friends and relatives were permitted to enter to pay their respects.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife, who was the second daughter of the Morrows, received word of the tragedy from Mrs. Morrow. It was relayed to the Lindberghs aboard a British battleship off the China coast by the British naval station radio at Shanghai. The message urged them not to hurry home or to change their vacation plans.

FUNERAL TOMORROW

Funeral services will take place tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the First Presbyterian Church of Englewood, of which the Rev. Dr. Carl H. Elmore, a personal friend of the Morrows, is pastor.

With his death, the political situation in New Jersey became tangled, for the time being. His loss stunned his colleagues, who recognized him as the leading Republican opponent of prohibition. His Democratic rivals, who throughout the senatorial campaign had never touched on or critized his personal or political life in a single speech, sent their regrets to his family and to his party.

Dwight Morrow, a comparative newcomer in politics, was dominant in New Jersey's Republican circles. He was the one man, politicians admitted, who was greater in personal popularity than the offices he hoped to win.

CAMPAIGN HALTED

The gubernatorial campaign in New Jersey between former United States Senator Baird, whom Mr. Morrow succeeded, and former Gov. Harry A. Moore has been brought to an abrupt halt by his death.

It was thought in political circles that either Baird, or Walter E. Edge, ambassador to France, might be named by Gov. Larson as his successor.

He left his wife, Elizabeth Reeve Cutter, three daughters, Elizabeth, Anne Lindbergh and Constance, and a son, Dwight W., Jr.

Statesmen and Business Chiefs Praise Morrow

Associated Press.

Statesmen, diplomats and leaders in finance, business and education have spoken as with one voice in expressing their grief at the death of Senator Dwight W. Morrow and in paying tribute to his character and achievements.

PRESIDENT HOOVER: His loyal and generous character as a neighbor and friend, his public spirit as a citizen, his services during the war, his acomplishments as ambassador to Mexico, his unique contribution to the success of the London naval conference—all are the record of that sort of an American who makes our country great.

PRIME MINISTER MACDONALD: I am greatly grieved by the loss of one whom I have long regarded as a most delightful personality and a much valued friend.

SENATOR DAVID A. REED: I have known Mr. Morrow since boyhood. In my opinion he was one of the ablest men in public life in this generation. His death is an incalculable loss to the nation.

TREASURY SECRETARY ANDREW W. MELLON: I am deeply distressed to hear of the death of Senator Morrow. I valued his friendship and had the greatest respect for his judgment. He was a man of extraordinary mental powers and of the highest integrity, which, combined with his wide experience in business and public affairs and his rare personal charm made him a dominant figure in Washington and in our national life. Such a man can ill be spared, especially at such a time as this. His death is a great loss to the country.

GOV. GIFFORD PINCHOT: The death of Mr. Morrow is a loss of great importance to the people of the United States. The ability shown by him as ambassador to Mexico makes the nation his debtor. His service to the nation in the cause of peace increases this debt.

J. P. Morgan, when advised of Mr. Morrow's death at his country home at Alderman, Hertforshire, England, made no comment.

AMBASSADOR CHARLES G. DAWES: We shall not see his like again. To him the multitude came for help and guidance and no one was ever turned away. He gave his strength to the weak, his substance to the poor, his sympathy to the suffering.

WILKINS PARTY FINDS POLAR MOUNTAIN

Returning Members of Crew Tell of Fathom Readings Showing Submerged Peak

By HERMAN GIESKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Discovery of a submerged mountain in the North Polar seas, a scientific event of the first magnitude, was revealed today by returning explorers of Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine Nautilus.

Ray Meyers, chief radioman of the expedition, told of amazing fathometer readings that showed Sir Hubert and his aides they were over a peak whose summit was scarcely 18 fathoms below the Arctic Ocean's ice-glazed surface.

If later expeditions and soundings enable scientists to chart the exact location and perimeter of the mountain, current ideas as to how the solar system was formed may have to be revised. Many explorers have hitherto held the belief that unlike the South Pole, there was no great bulge of the earth at the North Pole.

CHARTING BALKED

When the sounding was taken, Meyers said, the expedition was within 290 miles of the North Pole. He declared:

"The fathometer, which shows ocean depths by bouncing sound waves off the bottom, had been showing 2,000 fathoms. Suddenly the depth reading showed shallower and shallower water, until finally the meter registered only 18 to 25 fathoms. Had weather and ice conditions permitted us to remain longer, we undoubtedly could have charted its circumference. There was no doubt in the minds of scientists that we had found a mountain."

All of the 11 returning members of Sir Hubert's expedition agreed that a submarine transit, under the ice, is feasible, in a better boat and under Arctic summer weather conditions. By this they meant the ice would not be so thick as they encountered in September, when the winter freeze begins, and that they would suffer from fewer mechanical mishaps, Meyers explained.

"Special devices will have to be installed before a submarine can again venture into the Arctic, according to Master Diver Frank Crilley, who found the Nautilus' diving rudder had been snapped off."

BEARS OF 'DISTRESS'

Radioman Meyers said vocal broadcasts from the interior of the Nautilus actually were heard in England, though not in America. He explained the six-day silence of the Nautilus by stating that the submarine's decks had been cleared of radio masts and life lines. He explained:

"I happened to be out on the ice listening in on an emergency set when I heard Lowell Thomas say, 'The Nautilus has not been heard from. Relief expeditions are being organized.' We hastily rigged up our masts to inform the world we were all O. K."

ADVISES WOMEN ON BEAUTY

Pittsburgh women have a real problem in keeping their skins clean and healthful in this smoky city, according to Barbara Gould, New York beauty specialist, who is here this week. She said:

"First of all be clean. Then accentuate your own charm. Strive for a natural effect, rather than a grotesque one. Some women look better with rouge, others without. Enhance your natural loveliness and you can't go wrong."

Miss Gould advocates exercise for good circulation and a trim figure. Strenuous exercise is passe, she said. Rather, one should eat and exercise moderately to obtain the curves and rounded lines of the prevailing mode.

The softer hair lines require a softer looking makeup about the eyes and more delicate, natural coloring of the cheeks and lips, she said. Pittsburgh women, especially, need cleansing and protective creams, because of climatic and atmospheric conditions here.

Miss Gould, who is at Kaufmann's this week, has just returned from abroad, where she established beauty salons in Paris, Berlin, Prague, Rome, London, Vienna, Budapest and Milan. She says European women are good makeup technicians, but know little about the cleansing and nourishing care of the skin.

Heating Engineers Hear Talk on Air

Air conditions and their effect on health and comfort were described by Willis H. Carrier, past president of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers in an address last night at the first fall meeting of the Pittsburgh chapter of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers in the Keystone Club. Mr. Carrier also explained the methods used in cooling theaters and public buildings.

DROP DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The Travelers Insurance Company has announced it will write no disability income clauses into its life insurance policies after October 15.

The Metropolitan Life company made a similar announcement, effective January 1, in a trade publication recently.

The Travelers company said it would continue to waive payment of premiums by persons totally disabled by sickness or accident, but no income would be paid them. Receipts from premiums were not adequate to make disability income practicable, officials said.

Several other large companies were reported considering similar action.

BOY, 6, INJURED, PARENTS SUE

Mr. and Mrs. William Thorns, of Grand avenue, asked $35,000 damages for injuries to their son, Harry, 6, in a suit against the M. O'Herron Company, contractor, filed in Common Pleas Court. The company was improving Noblestown road during August and piled stones on a footpath, and while the boy was passing a 1,400-pound curbing stone fell on him and crushed his foot and injured his back, the suit charged.

Mrs. Victoria Vallee, 39, of 75 Washington place, proprietor of a music shop, asked $25,000 damages for injuries in a taxicab accident in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Pittsburgh Transportation Company. Her husband, Louis Vallee, joined in the suit. Her nose was broken and her back injured when she was thrown against the front partition of a taxicab in which both were riding home March 3, the suit avers.

APPOINTMENTS END M. E. MEET AT INDIANA

District Superintendents Named; Bishop Welch Retained by Conference

By THE REV. C. T. MURDOCK
Staff Correspondent

INDIANA, Pa., Oct. 6.—The announcement of ministerial appointments and the naming of district superintendents brought a close to the annual sessions of the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here last night.

The conference abolished the Pittsburgh district and assigned J. S. Payton, superintendent to Asbury Church, Pittsburgh. The member churches of the Pittsburgh district were transferred to the four other districts.

W. S. Trosh of the Allegheny district, was re-appointed. The Rev. R. W. McKenzie of Asbury Church, was appointed superintendent of the Blairsville district to succeed the Rev. N. H. Sanner who was assigned to the Mifflin Avenue Church, Wilkinsburg. The Rev. L. D. Spangler of the First Church, McKeesport, was named superintendent of that district replacing the Rev. T. R. Courtice, transferred to the First Church, McKeesport.

DIFFICULTIES MET

The Rev. B. R. McKnight of the First Church, Uniontown, was appointed superintendent of the Washington district to succeed R. B. Cuthbert, who was named superintendent of the Home for the Aged.

The conference yesterday was largely occupied with routine business, listening to reports and acting on memorials to the general conference. The difficulties in making the appointments protracted our stay until 8:30 p. m. All memorials of a drastic character, curiously affecting our institutions and policy were laid on the table. The eulogies for the retiring district superintendents, the Rev. Sanner, the Rev. Payton and the Rev. Cuthbert were enthusiastically adopted.

BISHOP RETAINED

Bishop Herbert Welch received a unanimous invitation to be our bishop for another term of four years. The following resolutions of thanks were passed:

"Our heartfelt thanks are due to the pastor, Dr. J. A. McCamey, his gracious lady and all the congregation for the courteous and gracious way they have entertained.

"Resolved that the administrative genius of our resident Bishop Welch met every acid test in the heated atmosphere of debate. A spirit of fairness and patience characterizes the conduct of our affairs."

The conference reindorsed its stand on birth control which was taken a year ago. A statement issued at the closing sessions read:

"In view of the effort being made to secure the revision of our laws at the next regular session of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, in order that parenthood may become consecration and not an accident, we reaffirm the strong statement adopted by this conference one year ago in behalf of the Christian principle of family limitation."

Boy Fearing Loss Of Long Pants Flees Home

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 6—"Faster than air mail" or almost. That applies to William Brojak, 15, taken to the Catholic Home at Harbor Creek on Sunday by Sheriff Voorhees. Before the Sheriff had returned to Franklin, Brojak was back in Oil City, hitch-hiking it in record time. He said:

"I didn't like it there. They were going to cut my pants and make shorts of them. Then I got into a fight with one of the boys and that settled it."

Brojak was accused of stealing a bicycle, and Judge Parker decided that the home was best for him, and his parents agreed. Deputy Sheriffs Victor Voorhees and Lon Baker took Brojak back to the home with instructions that a closer watch be kept.

M'GOVERN ASKS REFORMS

After conferring with District Attorney Andrew T. Park on the progress of the grand jury election probe, County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, today advocated revision of laws to permit a more centralized system of election machinery.

He said:

"If the grand jury investigation is confined to assessments in the lower wards of Pittsburgh, I feel sure valuable evidence will be obtained.

"My aim is to build up public confidence in our election system. To that end I believe some changes should be made. In Buffalo, N. Y., after many years, a system was set up whereby assessment and registration of voters is all handled by one centralized group. In that city the cost of holding an election is 80 cents per capita against $3 in Allegheny County. I advocate some such plan in our county."

McGovern said he called on Park as a member of the board of commissioners who had voted a special appropriation for the grand jury probe and that Park had explained the procedure and scope.

BRITISH VOTING ARRANGED FOR OCT. 27

MacDonald Will Run as Laborite, He Declares; Lloyd George Assailed

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—A new general election will be held in Great Britain on October 27, it was officially announced today.

King George, it was learned from an authoritative source, will dissolve Parliament tomorrow and election campaigning will begin immediately.

Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald who brought about the election by achieving unity among the members of his coalition cabinet, removed all doubt as to his own plans by announcing he would run for Parliament as a Labor candidate, despite the efforts of Conservatives to give him a Tory constituency to assure his election. The Premier said:

"I remain a member of the Labor party. I shall fight as a Labor candidate and use the Labor colors wherever I go."

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Official announcement of the coming dissolution was made by the Premier in the House of Commons this afternoon. He said:

"I had an audience with His Majesty the King this morning and asked for dissolution of Parliament. His Majesty empowered me to announce he had consented."

Thus far the election squabble has resulted in an unprecedented victory for Premier MacDonald. He will face the country at the head of a national non-partisan union with Conservatives and Liberals pledged to support him regardless of specific party issues.

LLOYD GEORGE SCORED

Arrayed against him will be the Laborites and the lonely figure of David Lloyd George, Liberal chieftain who refused to sanction a general election even though half of his party went over to the side of MacDonald. As a result, Lloyd George, according to the opinion in some quarters, is faced with political extinction. In the press, he is being pilloried as the man who tried to shatter the national unity for the sake of his own ideals.

Turkish Premier Sails for Budapest

Foes Concede McGovern's Nomination

worth of voting machines likely will be idle at the November election because of the multiplicity of party columns, dvelopments today indicated.

Eleven party names are listed to appear on the ballot, whereas the voting machines provide for only nine party columns.

Gilbert C. Cloonan, chief of the County Bureau of Elections, said that in event one candidate files nomination papers under any one of the recently pre-empted party names, the column must be entered. Today is the last day for filing such papers.

The parties, regular and for which pre-emption papers have been filed, are Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Prohibition, Liberal, Communist, Independent, Fair Play, Square Deal, Non-Partisan, and Citizens.

Pre-emption papers for the Citizens' party were filed yesterday. This is the party on which John Francies, County Treasurer, is expected to run for County Commissioner with the backing of the Kline-Coyne organization. There was a reported possibility that C. C. McGovern's name also would appear on this ticket in addition to several others.

According to Cloonan, 645 voting machines have been delivered to date by the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, of Baltimore. The entire 1,100 contracted for are expected to be on hand by the November election.

Commissioner Nomination Hinges on Vote Ruling

The battle of Independents to have thrown out the commissionership vote in the First District of Forward Township and the Fourth of Wilmerding, in which Joseph G. Armstrong received 1,352 votes by unofficial returns against 75 for C. C. McGovern, was to be resumed today before judges of the Returning Board.

On the outcome may hinge the second Republican commissionership nomination.

With 836 districts tabulated of 932 in Allegheny County, Armstrong's lead over McGovern was cut today to 3,445. With this slash there are still two more wards in Wilkinsburg and several in McKeesport, where McGovern ran far ahead of Armstrong, to be canvassed.

CHARGES FRAUD

In demanding that both the Wilmerding Borough and Forward Township districts be barred, McGovern charged numerous frauds.

Judges George V. Moore and Elder W. Marshall were to hold a hearing on the Forward Township petition today.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park, his first assistant, Roy T. Clunk, and County Detective David Drexler, election expert, were subpenaed to appear before the return board at 4 p. m. today to testify as to any evidence of fraud found when they examined the ballot box of that district. The ballot box also was ordered brought before the return board.

McGovern's petition to void the vote of the Wilmerding district will be heard at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

To speed up the vote count machinery, night sessions were held last night by both the return and the recount boards. The return board expects to certify the official canvass Thursday so that ballot lists can be prepared by October 15 for the November election.

JURY HEARS DREXLER

The September grand jury today paused in the investigating of alleged illegal assessments of First Ward voters long enough to hear Detective Drexler testify as to what he found when he examined the ballot boxes of the Second District, Fifth Ward, and Sixteenth District, Nineteenth Ward. His appearance indicated fraud had been unearthed.

The jurors then resumed hearing witnesses on assessment. One hundred First Ward residents were listed to testify today. Two hundred more have been subpenaed to testify tomorrow.

Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy, who first discovered evidence of fraud in the First Ward assessment, was summoned to confer with District Attorney Park today. He took along 519 certificates issued by the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes and 519 duplicates of tax receipts issued to persons holding such certificates.

The recount board, occupied in re-tabulating votes in districts where ballots were questioned in the fight for County Commissioner, Judge, Aldermanic and Constable nominations, will complete its work Thursday in time to be included in the official tabulations of the return board, recount supervisors said today.

Comparison of the unofficial with the official returns in 836 districts shows:

Official
Mansfield	McGovern	Coyle	Armstrong

could not give them away while his wife lived.

He followed an example set by the late Benjamin Altman, whose collection, surpassing any other made in this generation, was left to the City of New York, in which his fortune was made.

AND SO IT GOES: energy and intelligence build great fortunes; the people profit by them.

Or if owners foolishly leave too much to children, the children squander, usually, what they did not earn, and the money returns to the people.

ALL FIVE of Edison's children are close to his bedside. The great genius and benefactor of this nation is gradually losing strength. The doctors give what comfort they can, saying:

"Mr. Edison slept better, almost six hours."

But there is no real comfort.

Unfortunately for his health, Mr. Edison has persistently deprived himself of needed sleep, grudging every hour taken from his work, even in old age. And that counts against him now.

Because of curtailing sleep, Mr. Edison did to his nerve battery, his own nervous system, what he would not do to his electric batteries.

POPE PIUS has repeatedly inquired by cable concerning Mr. Edison's health. Mr. Edison is described as a "free thinker," but that makes no difference to the head of the Catholic Church, who sees greater importance in Edison's services to the human race than in his passing individual beliefs.

John Eyre Sloane, Edison's son-in-law, who is a Roman Catholic, has acknowledged gratefully the sympathetic messages from the Pope.

OPTIMISM IS beautiful, especially in a depression. Therefore, praise Mr. "Stitch" McCarthy, who defeated Mr. Jack Spero, in a contest for the title of "Chief of the New York League of Locality Mayors, Inc."

Mr. "Stitch," in the course of many fights and speeches that enlivened the election, remarked:

"This Spero is just a crab . . . Why, I beat him practically unanimous; the vote was 12 to 11."

That interpretation of figures is real optimism.

UNPLEASANT HOURS in Wall street yesterday, the foolish that bought too high and too excitedly throwing property overboard for less than half its value.

But the foolish man's fear is the wise man's opportunity. These days of depression will lay the foundation of future independence and permanent prosperity for many.

HOOVER FAVORS 3-YEAR TRUCE

of time much can be accomplished in organizing and getting under way the heavy legislative program facing them.

The demand for a three-year instead of a one-year moratorium is declared to come from important financial and business interests who maintain that such an extension of time will unable Europe to stabilize its wavering currencies and thus aid world-wide business recovery.

Objections to such an additional extension without certain guarantees from the European powers is being raised, however, by important congressional leaders. They have told the President that without definite assurances from Europe that immediate steps will be initiated to effect drastic disarmament measures that the American public will oppose further financial assistance.

ASK DISARMAMENT

They insist that Europe must act in the matter of disarmament, scaling down on reparations, and settling such dangerous problems as the Polish corridor before this country will sanction further financial relief. Unless the European nations signify their intention of dealing with these problems at once, these congressional leaders told the President that another debt holiday will be viewed by the American people as amounting to practical cancellation.

The President, in considering the additional two-year moratorium extension, is proceeding along the same lines he took when he had the one-year plan under advisement. He is calling to the White House financial and political leaders and using the telephone in reaching others unable to come to the capital.

TALKS WITH BARUCH

In the last few days he discussed the matter with Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier; Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and Undersecretary Ogden L. Mills, Senator Dwight W. Morrow, Senator William E. Borah, and Julius Barnes, chairman of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Among those who will participate in tonight's conference are:

Senators Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, and Glenn (Rep.), of Illinois, and Representatives Tilson (Rep.), Connecticut; Bacharach (Rep.), New Jersey; McDuffie (Dem.), Alabama; Snell (Rep.), New York, and Garner (Dem.), Texas.

Garner was rushed to Washington from his Texas home by a special army airplane for the express purpose of attending the meeting.

MINE HEAP FIRE PROTEST FILED

An injunction against the Butler Consolidated Coal Company ordering it to extinguish fires in a "gob" dump and restraining further dumping of refuse near its workings in Hampton and McCandless townships was asked in an equity suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Clyde E. Speer, who lives at Mt. Royal and Perrysville roads. This section has developed into a high class residential community in recent years while the coal company has been developing 6,000 acres of coal in the two townships, the suit charged.

Unused combustible materials [illegible] called "gob" from the mines has been deposited since July, 1928, in a dump near Speer's property and a year ago it became a huge heap, igniting in various places and throwing off noxious odors and vapors constituting a public nuisance and menace to the neighborhood the suit alleged.

Church Societies Change Meetings To Save Fuel

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 6 (AP).—Seven societies of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of New Castle have found a way to save time and fuel as a means of cutting down church expenses. All seven will meet on the same day of each month at designated hours instead of on different days and for periods of time longer than an hour.

AUTOISTSURGED TO CURB FIRES

The Pittsburgh Motor Club today asked all motorists to co-operate in National Fire Prevention Week by cleaning their garages of waste and refuse in addition to making a complete inspection of heating systems and electrical connections.

Officers of the club suggested that metal containers be installed in private garages for waste materials and that oil and grease be removed from the floors periodically.

The club will also sponsor radio addresses in connection with the observance.

BOYS AND GIRLS WELCOME NEW KOMIC CLUB

Applications Pouring in by Hundreds; Branches Form At Theaters on Saturday

Never before in the history of boy and girl organization activity has there been so much excitement and enthusiasm as that created by the announcement of the plans for the new Warner Theaters - Sun - Telegraph Junior Komic Club. New applications are coming in by the hundreds from every city and town where the Sun-Telegraph is read. Taking into consideration that the Warner Theaters' "Kiddies" Club already had a membership of 20,000, it is safe to say that the new Junior Komic Club will enroll 50,000 new members before the Christmas holiday parties are announced.

New membership cards and new membership buttons will be ready for distribution at the regular meetings next Saturday.

NEW CHAPTERS

There will also be two new chapters formed next Saturday—one at the Harris Theater, downtown, and another at the East Liberty Enright Theater. This will not conflict with the big chapter already organized and in action at the Cameraphone Theater in East Liberty.

Boys and girls who want to join the Junior Komic Club and enjoy the entertainment and activities of the organization must enroll at the chapter meeting next Saturday. If they do not live in the vicinity of these theaters, they are invited to send in their application on the blank printed on this page, upon receipt of which they will be mailed membership buttons and cards and later be assigned to membership in a chapter in their own home town or neighborhood.

The chapters already organized meet every Saturday at the following theaters: Rowland, South Hills, Kenyon, Etna, Schenley, Manor, Arsenal, Belmar, Plaza, Cameraphone and Prince.

SPECIAL PROGRAM

The dues at the above chapters are 10 cents each Saturday, but that gives you a big special program of entertainment for the club, also the feature picture showing at the theater where the chapter meets, and an opportunity to use the theater for the weekly special business of your chapter.

Let's get quick action for that 50,000 membership before the Christmas holidays. Don't wait! Enroll today! Read the Sun-Telegraph every day for additional details about the activities of the Junior Komic Club.

Officer Who Killed Burglar Released

Patrolman Daniel (Smiling Dan) McGreevey, who last Friday fatally shot Charles Williams, 41, Negro, of 514 North Aiken avenue, as he fled from the home of Dr. H. M. WHEN YOU OVER-INDULGE

THERE are times when we all are tempted to take a holiday from the usual prudence.

Where is the person who wants to be discreet in diet every day in the year? It isn't human!

And it isn't necessary!

Your stomach won't be poisoned by every little indiscretion if you will just remember to give it the friendly aid of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It will sweeten the sour system and put things to rights.

Suppose you do overload your stomach with those things that bring on acidity? Phillips' Milk of Magnesia will neutralize many times its volume in acid. Just take two spoonfuls before and after such overindulgence. It's a very simple way to prevent those miserable mornings which follow too much to eat and drink.

When you over ndulge — eating, drinking, smoking — don't suffer for hours! Nature will restore a proper alkaline balance in time, but Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts immediately. A creamy, pleasant-tasting emulsion that sweetens the stomach, dispels that sour gas, and relieves the nausea and headache, and feeling of biliousness due to overdoing. (Phillips' mild laxative properties always help the bowels at such times.)

Make sure it's genuine. The signature of Chas. H. Phillips on the wrapper and bottle will tell you it's the real product endorsed by the medical profession. Less perfect preparations do not act the same.

For a Healthy Mouth

Use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia as a mouthwash every evening before retiring. Use Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior tooth-paste, to keep the teeth clean and white.

Blind Association Asks Council Aid

City Council was to consider today a request from the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind for $23,955.66 to prevent a deficit caused by increased activities during the present year among the city's sightless. John E. Potter and Francis A. Keating, officials of the association at 434-436 Boulevard of the Allies, told Council yesterday of the deficit for 1931 unless the Councilmanic appropriation is made.

The finance committee, headed by W. Y. English, will discuss the request at its meeting today.

High School Players Rehearsing Comedy

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Hank and Bill Get First Glimpse of Baby

I held none of the material resentment against my husband's nephews which mothers of young babies are supposed to feel at any slight, real or fancied. I had had enough experience in teaching adolescent boys to know that nothing so bores them, or gives them such a panicky feeling as being expected to view a new baby and comment upon it. Junior and Roderick were at the age where the baby was something most delightful, a sort of super rabbit or puppy, but to the older boys she was an unknown and terrifying quantity. I surmised that neither of them had seen an infant at close range, and, letting Junior and Roderick lead the way, I managed to get behind the boys and relieve my aching laughter muscles with a smile at Dicky which he returned with interest.

"Aunt Katherine! Aunt Katherine!" Junior vociferated as he neared the nursery door. "Here are Hank and Bill to see the baby."

"And she's all ready to see them," Katherine answered, swinging open the door to the upper side veranda. "She's a little lady, wakened just in time to have on a new dress and look her prettiest."

OTHER INTERESTS

She greeted the boys cordially and then wheeled the baby's carriage toward them. Both of them made a perceptible backing movement then, patently "remembering their manners," stood still and looked intently at our tiny new princess.

Junior and Roderick stood on either side of the carriage like showmen guarding some famous exhibit. Their eyes were fixed on the faces of the older boys, and they evidently awaited the verdict anxiously.

"Ain't she swell, kids?" Junior asked at last when the embarrassed silence of his cousins became too much for him.

"You bet she is," Bill answered quickly, and Hank chimed in with his invariable exclamation, "Gee!" adding all in one voice, "she's a fine baby. Say, kid," addressing his brother, "did you hear Uncle Dicky say that 'Spike' Miller lives at Southampton? Did you ever see him, Aunt Madge?"

His tone expressed the same awed interest that a loyal English lad might have used in asking if I had seen King George. Dicky, subduing a grin, came to the rescue.

"You'll find, Hank, that your aunt is lamentably ignorant upon some important points. I am looking to you and Bill to enlighten her. She may have seen 'Spike' but she does not know it, for she does not know who he is."

WANT TO SEE ATHLETE

Hank looked at me in wide-eyed wonder. Bill, older and keener, smiled, but also flushed sensitively.

"Spike Miller, my dear," went on Dicky, with the air of imparting information to a small child, "is, was, and will be, please Allah, a Yale fullback of certain eminence."

"Yes, I've met him," I said demurely. "I know his mother. I had thought of asking him over some evening if we had an informal dance before all our young people go back to school."

"Sock!" Dicky suited the action to the word and gave himself a backhand blow in the chest. "That's the way your aunt always scores when I get a bit playful."

But his nephews were paying no attention to him. Their eyes were widely fixed upon me.

"You know 'Spike,'" Hank said. "You've talked to him. Then—maybe—maybe——"

"Of course, you shall have a chance to meet him," I said promptly. "But now you'd better get back to your room and get ready for dinner. You'll want to unpack some of your things, won't you?"

"That's right, I forgot. Come on, Bill." Hank started precipitately for the door, an oddly worried look on his face which I did not understand, for it never has been my experience that school boys give any thought whatever to their luggage. But Bill lingered, and with evident effort brought out a question with which he plainly meant to preserve the social amenities, and to evince his interest in the baby.

"What's her name?" he asked, inclining his head toward the carriage.

DISCUSS NAMES

"Aw! Gee! Bill!" Roderick's voice was shrill in its emphatic disapproval. "What d'ye think. A swell kid like this, and she hasn't got any name. But me and Jun—I mean Jun and I," with an apprehensive glance at me, "we picked out some swell ones, but I don't know whether Aunt Madge is going to take 'em or not. They're——"

"Suppose you tell the boys about the names down in their room while they unpack," I interposed hastily. "Or, will they bother you?" I put the question purposely, for I wanted to see the reaction of the older boys to the prospective company of the younger ones.

"No, we'd like to have 'em," Bill said promptly, and Hank added an emphatic "sure thing." Roderick and Junior, faces beaming, ranged themselves on either side of the older boys, and the little procession started down the hall while Dicky looked at me with quizzical eyes.

"So the youngsters have gone into the baby-naming contest," he said. "Let's hear 'em."

A sudden remembrance of the promise I had made to my father prompted my answer.

"I have more than that for you to hear," I said. "Where can I have a talk with you?"

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Official System as Adopted By Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

An Opening Bid Announces Cards of Real Merit

A hand worth an opening bid affords a golden opportunity to convey very definite information to partner at small risk. Almost every player loves to bid. If your partner is hopelessly weak one or the other of your opponents almost certainly will outbid your own modest strength. There is less than one chance in 20 that any sound opening bid of one will be left in and defeated badly.

The minimum requirements for making an opening bid of one of any suit are: (1) Possession of from 2 to 2½ quick tricks; (2) A biddable suit of not less than 4 cards; (3) Probable ability to fulfill contract in case dummy holds at least 3 small trumps and three probable tricks.

An opening bid of one denies possession of seven probable tricks, as such strength would demand a higher bid. Therefore the bidder of one never seeks immediate support upon three probable tricks, for that cannot yield a game. Assist an opening bid of one only in case you hold normal trump support, also better than the average dummy strength of 1½ quick tricks or three probable tricks. Whether you should at once support partner or shift to a strong make of your own is an important topic requiring future detailed consideration.

A few very talented players of long experience are able to value hands almost instinctively. But more than the famous 99.44 per cent of players require the definite means of valuing holdings, which will be given in the next two articles.

In general, shun the weak opening bids once popular at auction bridge, where partners could score whatever they won. To benefit most at contract bridge, partners must bid the games and slams that appear possible.

In the long run little, if anything, is to be gained by opening bids on holdings like the following. Not one of the hands shown exceeds average strength.

Hand No. 1.	Hand No. 2.
♠ A-K-Q-6	♠ 9-5
♥ 9-4-3	♥ A-K-10-8-4

Hand No. 3.

♠ K-7-5
♥ 6-3-2
♣ A-K-9-5
♦ 10-7-4

An opening bid announces cards of real merit; a powerful suit; a biddable suit and great honor strength; or a good two-suiter—something tangible and offering partner an inducement to make even rather a weak declaration.

Preserve these articles until you are master of them. All technical terms will be fully explained in later articles, as well as how to count quick tricks and probable tricks.

(Tomorrow: How to Count Quick Tricks).

Fay King Pities Young Pair Who Are Parted by Attentions of Rich

YOU CAN USE MY CAR ANYTIME YOU WISH
I'M NOT AT ALL INTERESTED IN HIM, BUT HE CERTAINLY KNOWS HOW TO ENTERTAIN
SHE DOESN'T MEAN A THING IN MY LIFE, BUT SHE'S GOT A PEACH OF A CAR!
I LIKE TO TAKE YOU AROUND TO SMART PLACES!
FAY KING

By FAY KING.

It is a pity when a young couple in love come to the parting of the ways because they cannot resist accepting attentions they like from others with more means.

A young man loses his girl because he cannot refuse the invitation from a woman who owns a fine big car.

A girl loses her young man because she cannot resist being taken to expensive, smart places by a man who has more money.

The woman with the big car and the man with the big bank roll seem so surprised to hear that their harmless attentions have made a difference between the young couple in love.

But their generous and harmless attentions never are so much so that they entertain the young couple together!

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Don't Be Too Sisterly With the Boys

She's a Jolly Chum—

Sympathetic, sisterly and a good listener—'n' the boys like her—

But do they ever date her?

Nope. They don't. They collect on her furniture about meal time. They tell her all their troubles. They rave about the cutie on the next block, and how they've fallen for her—and then (after they've absorbed a good dinner) they go home.

Boys give me a pain!" she wails. "They say they want a girl to be a good pal, and then all they do is tell her about their love affairs—with some other girl! I'm getting sick and tired of it, so there!"

Do you know the answer?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I wonder if you can tell me the answer to something that is puzzling me. It may not sound serious, but it is to me, so I hope you can help me out.

"Ever since I was a little girl I've heard folks rave about boys liking a girl who is a good, sympathetic chum, and I've tried playing that, and what has it got me? Nothing except a lot of them weeping on my shoulder—about their love affairs with some other girl.

"I know lots of boys, and they come over to my apartment, which I share with a girl who works with me, and they park on the sofa and talk. They tell me all their troubles and stay so long that I'm simply compelled to ask them to dinner or go without it myself.

TIRING OF THEM

"But do these boys ever ask me out, or seem aware that I might like a box of candy or a book, or some of the other nicknacks they take to the girls they fall for? No, ma'am! They don't!

"My gosh! They don't seem aware that I'm a girl at all! I might be a grandmother, or a father confessor, or something. Otherwise I'm just not noticed, and I'm getting darned tired of it. I'm so lonesome for a real boy friend and a little romance and fun that I could scream. They give me a pain and I'd like to tell them so!

"What's the answer? Can you tell me? Gosh, I hope so, because I'm fed up on this pal stuff. I'm tired of being an old shoe or a wailing wall or something. They're always praising me and telling me what a swell little pal I am, but that's all. And what I want is some regular attention. What's wrong, anyway? Why can't they see me as a girl? "MICKEY."

Why can't they see you as a girl as well as a "Good Fellow?"

TOO SISTERLY

Maybe it's because you're too much of a good fellow, honey. You've let them take you too much for granted. You've in some way made yourself seem just like "one of the fellows." And in doing that, you've smothered romance.

Sure boys like a girl that's a pal . . . But there are pals—and pals.

Some pals are like comfortable, plodding old roads. You know every angle—every bump. There isn't a thrill in 50 miles of 'em.

And other pals are like twisty-witchey little wood trails . . . teasing and provoking—full of mystery and adventure.

I'm afraid the boys have accepted you as a familiar old road. They like you. They couldn't do without you. They use you constantly. But there's nothing unexpected about you. They never look to you to provide the mystery which every man is seeking.

Your heart's all right, honey, but you need to change your technique.

Stop being so sisterly. Flirt a little, tease them a little, kid them a little. And stop letting them lean. Do a little leaning yourself. Be a bit temperamental . . . Be out now and then when they call . . . make 'em think that if they want to see you they'll have to step lively.

Keep that fine sympathy you have. It will make your life lovely and rich some day. But add some fizz to it. And watch 'em stop, look and listen!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

War on Tuberculosis Continues to Progress

Since 1900, the death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half. This is a remarkable achievement, but we must not stop our efforts.

Tuberculosis is a disease which, if recognized early and proper treatment is given, is curable. Of course there are some cases in which the future is not quite so bright. But in the majority of cases, much can be done by way of cure when the attack is treated in its early stages.

Dr. Copeland

Adequate care for these individuals often rests upon the state. Most of the large cities have adequate facilities. But smaller communities often fall behind in their duty to provide institutions for the care of tubercular persons. It is not wholly the fault of the public that tuberculosis thrives. It must not be overlooked that all too many persons fail to give their bodies proper attention. As a result of this negligence, tuberculosis may make its attack. Then perhaps the disease is not recognized until it is advanced so far that cure is impossible.

If all persons would visit their doctors at least twice a year, many a disease like tuberculosis, would be disposed of at once. Whether they have any complaints or not, everybody should have these periodical examinations. If they did this there would be a tremendous number of cases of tuberculosis recognized in the stage when the disease is curable. With the application of immediate care and medical attention, it would be but a short time when the road to recovery would be filled with happy people.

It is a pity that many an individual who has tuberculosis and knows it, hesitates to seek relief. This is because he fears being sent away from home and becoming a social outcast.

Such an attitude is unwise and unnecessary. Institutions devoted to the care of tubercular patients are usually located in the most ideal surroundings. Hardly a community fails to offer suitable places for the treatment. The time spent in these establishments is not unpleasant.

Persons without the necessary funds to go to a private sanitarium, find that public sanitariums are readily located. No great hardship is imposed upon those seeking relief.

Nothing is more selfish than for an individual who has tuberculosis to continue in his daily work. He has daily contacts which may cause others to contract the disease.

It is only by the earnest cooperation of all that the prevalence of this disease can be further reduced. The campaigns against tuberculosis deserve generous support.

Household Hints

Sprinkle the new shoes inside with talcum powder. They will be much more comfortable during the "breaking-in" process.

When stewing prunes add a teaspoonful of cornflour to every half-pound of fruit. It improves the flavor and makes good syrup.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thanks for Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What should I say when a person expresses sympathy for a death in the family?

PUZZLED.

The person should not do this, for no one should speak to another of such a personal grief unless the sorrowing person should introduce the conversation. However, if someone does do this, say "Thank you for your sympathy, you are very kind," or "I appreciate your sympathy so much. Thank you."

Acknowledging a Birth Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received a birth announcement a few days ago. Will you tell me the correct way to answer it? Should I answer it with a card or with a gift?

If I should answer it with a card, please tell me what form and what kind of stationery to use? L. H.

Although this announcement needn't necessarily be answered, usually we do wish to send some kind of message of congratulation and good wishes. If the mother is a very close friend of yours, undoubtedly you will wish to send a gift for the baby, or flowers for the mother, including in the box a tiny baby bouquet, one of the piquant little 1830 tight bouquets of rows of small flowers.

If you do not know the mother very well, write a note of good wishes and friendliness to her. The letter paper on which you wrote to me would be appropriate.

Anniversary Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly advise me as to whether it is proper or not to have a surprise anniversary party for my sister?

This is her first anniversary. F. Z.

Yes, this is all right, but it would be better form to give the party not as a "surprise."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Brown mascara can be used to make eyebrows darker and more enticing. Dip the small brush in water, pass over the cake of mascara and touch brows lightly. It will do for eyelashes, if applied skillfully.

A hand lotion that is cheap and excellent can be made with little effort. Soak 60 grains of gum tragacanth in 14 ounces of stronger rosewater. Let stand for three days. Add one ounce of rubbing alcohol and one ounce of glycerine. Throw in a few drops of precious perfume, and there you are. Dries immediately after application.

KANE CASE GOES TO GRAND JURY

HAMPTON, Va., Oct. 6 (INS.)—A dozen witnesses were on hand today as Prosecutor Roland Cock presented the case of Prof. Elisha Kent Kane charged with deliberately drowning his wife to the grand jury.

Among those waiting to be called were W. C. Graham, father of Jenny Graham Kane, the drowned girl; W. Hop. Graham, her brother; four clammers who were on the beach when the drowning occurred, and Deputy Sheriff Tom Curtis, who made the arrest and investigated the background of Mrs. Betty Dahl, who corresponded with the professor.

Mrs. W. C. Graham, mother of Mrs. Kane, did not receive the subpena for her appearance, as she was recuperating from a nervous breakdown at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Webber, in Roanoke, Va.

Kansas to Seek U. S. Oil Embargo

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Oct. 6 —(AP.)—Thurman Hill, Kansas Public Service Commissioner, said today the commission had decided to file a complaint with the Federal Tariff Commission seeking to bring about an embargo on crude oil and refined products.

Hill told the Montgomery County Bar Association plans for formulation of the complaint will be made Friday at Topeka at a conference with leaders in the oil industry.

Lions Select Week To Boost Business

CHICAGO, Oct. 6—(AP.)—Plans for a national business confidence week, to be observed October 25 to 31, were completed by the board of directors of the Lions' International, which met yesterday.

The week will be observed in at least 2,600 communities where there are Lions clubs. Each club will set a quota of jobs which its membership will attempt to provide for unemployed.

Homestead Votes For Clara Bow And Capone

That voters of Homestead borough seek variety in their choice of election candidates was the opinion of the recount board today, as it went ahead with the count of the poll in Homestead.

It was discovered that Clara Bow and Herbert Hoover had each received one vote for County Commissioner, while Al Capone and "Legs" Diamond had each received one vote for judge and inspector of election respectively. Officials of the recount said today that they felt quite sure none of the quartet would be nominated for the county positions.

PINCHOT URGES PUBLIC JOB AID

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 6—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot told Pennsylvania directors of the poor that those who take the position that only through private funds should unemployment relief be raised are assuming a tremendous responsibility.

The Governor quoted President Hoover as having said recently that out of 45,000,000 children about 6,000,000 are not properly nourished and that there was a total then of at least 10,000,000 deficient children. He said:

"By inadequate food and home relief we are adding to each of the categories among the 10,000,000 deficient children. This is the result of saying too often that 'we have the situation well in hand.'"

The Governor said that he believed it will be as much of a crime for a president of a big industry to throw his workmen as helpless charges on the community as it is for him to embezzle a million dollars from his stockholders.

CLARA BOW LIFE OF PARTY AGAIN

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 6—(INS.)—Clara Bow, whose career in Hollywood was often regarded as one long joyous party, has broken through the dull routine of convalescence on the ranch of her admirer, Rex Bell, cowboy actor, to become the "life of the party" at a Las Vegas wedding.

Miss Bow, dressed in a smart street costume, attended the wedding of John E. Wilson, 30, and Elizabeth E. Cunningham, Los Angeles divorcee, and then took the wedding party to Las Vegas' biggest gambling hall and organized an impromptu dance. Bell was not present.

How Do Dancers Manage?

The professional engagements of a dancer make no allowance for the trying time of a woman's monthly sickness. Yet her period must not interfere with her easy, effortless performance. Such women do not "fight" periodic pain, but avoid it. They use Midol and do not suffer even a twinge of menstrual pain. Why don't you meet these monthly emergencies with this remarkable modern discovery?

Midol takes pain off the calendar. Monthly martyrdom is foolish. For Midol is as harmless as the aspirin tablet you take for your headache! All drug stores; just ask for Midol.

How Smart Shops Make Glassware Sparkle

BY MARY LEE WORK

A New Easy Way to Wash Dishes And Do 2 Other Hard Jobs In Half the Time

Ever wonder how the smart shops get glassware and fine china to sparkle like jewels on display?

It's really very simple. You can wash your own dishes the same way—get the same results—and actually save half the time you now spend. Here's how they do it.

They use a product called Climalene. Your grocer either has it or can obtain it for you.

Ends Grease Scum

Add one teaspoonful of Climalene to a dishpan of water, use only ¼ the amount of soap you now use. It instantly cuts the grease from dishes and cooking utensils, makes glassware sparkle and china gleam. The Climalene-softened water; plus certain bland cleansing agents, cuts your dishwashing time 1/3 or more—saves ¼ or more the soap you now use.

To Avoid Food, Gray Washings

Use 2 tablespoons of Climalene and ¼ the usual amount of soap. Clothes emerge soft, spotless, utterly without fading. For soap fade, and soap eat are ended this way. In recent tests men's blue shirts were washed 3 times without noticeable fade; sheerest French hosiery 100 times or more—to prove the blandness of this way.

Banish Bathtub Ring

Add a tablespoonful of Climalene to your bath water. It makes the water soft as summer rain. A quick, rich lather is made with soap. After the bath—just rinse the tub. That is all. There just isn't any "high-water" mark. No scrubbing—no rubbing.

Why It Cleans

Climalene instantly takes all the harshness out of lake water, medium hard water, and hard water. Makes it soft and gentle as rain water. So soft it does the work with ¼ the soap you now use. At the same time, due to certain bland cleansing agents, it instantly DISSOLVES all grease, dirt and grime, and thus cuts your working time ¼ or more, in washing, cleaning and in the dishpan.

PARK STUDIES POOR BOARD CHARGES

Scans Report of Visitors to Decide on Action; Ouster Proceedings Possibility

District Attorney Andrew T. Park today began the study of the report of the Board of Visitors of the Allegheny County Home, alleging irregularities on the part of the members of the Poor Board in conducting its affairs, while the visitors renewed their probe.

There are two courses open to the District Attorney, it was learned, either the making of information if they are justified, or starting ouster proceedings against the Poor Board, or both, just as the case warrants.

District Attorney Park would not discuss the subject, but following a conference with the board of visitors, consisting of Elverton H. Wicks, G. Malcom McDonald and Paul E. Hutchison, all attorneys, which was preceded by a long session with Judge James H. Gray, who appointed the members of the board, the board members gave out a statement.

CONFER WITH JUDGE

This was to the effect that they had been in conference with the District Attorney and Judge Gray and had discussed with them the matters contained in the report filed in court Saturday.

The statement then said:

"We recommended to the court and the District Attorney that a grand jury investigation at this time would mean only a duplication of the work of the committee and would entail unnecessary expense on the taxpayers."

District Attorney Park is in thorough accord with this, for he is of the opinion that the work of the committee relieves his office of making any grand jury investigation of the conduct of the Poor Board.

Further than admit that his office would order informations made if the disclosures warranted it, the District Attorney would not comment on the subject in the absence of all the facts.

"POOR PRACTICE"

Attorney H. W. McIntosh, who is counsel for the members of the board, which is composed of Maj. Clyde Miller, H. L. Henderson and H. H. Dixon, said the allegations set up in the report of the Board of Visitors had been outlawed as far as the purchase of real estate is concerned. However, McIntosh said:

"I admit that the practice of dividing the county up in the allotment of insurance was poor practice, but there was nothing wrong about it."

The Board of Visitors are now investigating outdoor relief payments (a large item of expense), purchase of equipment, livestock and automobiles to see if they check with recorded purchases. They are also looking into additional real estate transactions. It is claimed the Poor Board did not observe the law in making purchases.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

"SILENT CAL" Coolidge throws off the cloak of reticence at 9:30 tonight to inaugurate a new series over KDKA. Frazier Hunt, of the Cosmopolitan, is to interview Mr. Coolidge in the front room of his Northampton (Mass.) home.

Darrell V. Martin

We have heard few sopranos sing "In the Garden of Tomorrow" with the smooth technique of Lois Bennett, who teams this solo with "Indian Love Call" on KDKA at 8 tonight.

Walter Winchell interviews Norma Terris on WJAS at 8:45.

Two superb concerts are billed at 9 o'clock. Adolphe Dumont's Orchestra and Alice Mock singing "Berceuse" on KDKA and Fred Hufsmith, tenor, in a return to the air of "Musical Magazine" on WCAE. Ben Bernie introduces a new number, "It's Prom Hunger," on WJAS at 9.

We've often wondered (like everybody else) why the Ponce Sisters' harmony never lands them a sponsored program; they're on WEAF at 7:30 tonight, and, by the way, "War Thrillers," due to a change in time, has been deleted locally, but may be heard on WEAF, WTIC, WLS, WTAM or WGY at 8:30.

* * *

Joe Falvo, a brother of Bebe, the singer, brings a new program to WJAS waves at 6:45; and Lee Morse, the diminutive Southern girl with the big "blue" voice, is Tom Waring's guest on WTAM at 8:30.

Question a Day:

Are the announcements made by local stations during "station breaks" written out in advance or made extemporaneously by the local announcers on duty?—Janet B. Glenwood.

Answer—Only one local station, KDKA, prepares a script for its standbys. In fact, most every word spoken on this station is read from manuscript arranged hours in advance.

Radio engineers in New York have an organization they call the "Top Note Club"; the requirements for membership (apart from the muscle must ston the Empire State Building and touching the nut which fastens a small glistening ball.

Studio Lights

"Harbor Lights" has a rival in the "Sea Romance" series of CBS . . . we mused deeply on the graphic portrayal of Senta and her lover in Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Sunday night . . . real talent, real music, real sound effects give this program plenty of animation . . . tonight on WJAS at 9:30 the love story of two slaves captured by pirates . . . and next Sunday night, Red Christiansen of Galapagos fame, in person!

KMOX, at St. Louis, is spending $250,000 on new studios . . .

Daddy and Rollo have been importuned to return under another sponsor . . . a feature we certainly enjoyed . . .

Jane Froman, the new NBC flash, is plain Edith Jane to her family in St. Louis.

Substitution of Freddie Rich for Vic Young on Bing Crosby's social calendar was made necessary by Vic's busy schedule in the electrical transcription factory.

Col. Stoopnagle, after emerging from a trance, has a new invention . . . the anti-depression balloon, to keep his stocks up . . .

Frank Readick says he has impersonated Mayor "Jimmy" Walker so frequently on the CBS News Drama that he can't get to rehearsal on time . . .

Those Boswell Sisters must change their theme song from "Shout, Sister, Shout" to "Nothing Is Sweeter Than You" when they become the "Chocolate Girls" on CBS, starting Friday, October 16 . . .

NBC has an anxious public prostituted waiting for the official schedule of Morrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Band . . .

Pitt's game with Army at the Stadium on Saturday, Nov. 14, is to be "seen" in New York . . . Ted Husing's play by play description is to be televised on a miniature football field in CBS studios . . . and synchronized with actual sound from the Stadium . . .

The American Legion's stand on Prohibition is to be discussed by Henry Stevens, newly elected national commander, over CBS Friday night at 6:30 . . .

Phil Harris, Pacific coast phenomenon whose 40-fathom voice is said to have the lowest register on record, is to sing with the Vagabonds on KDKA tomorrow afternoon at 4 . . .

Eddie Cantor takes advantage of the 10 second "dead spot" on his Sunday night "standbys" to startle his audience with unexpected remarks like "Dinner is served in the dining room" "Vive la France" and "Mamma I want some candy" . . . this "dead spot" follows the ringing of NBC chimes signaling network stations to make local announcements.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The tetrarchs of television continue to flood the mails with their predictions. "Television," they keep on saying, "is peeking around the corner, is now out of the laboratory, offers America her greatest opportunity for a prosperity comeback."

The prosperity comeback in connection with television is a new one. Yet if enough people buy television sets there certainly will be prosperity for the television men . . . The trouble is to make them buy the sets . . . Gradually the day is getting nearer. Nobody wants to be left behind. Least of all the hotel panjandrums. The newest hotels are already wired for television, awaiting the time when an easy chair will be the magnet the bar used to be.

Room could be found oftener at the microphones for Joe Cook. Cook's nonsense seems fresher, more ingratiating than that of most Broadway comedians who take to the air . . . Now it is lifeboats that are to be equipped with radio transmitters and receivers.

Lifeboats of the new liner Mariposa, to be exact . . . It would be just Floyd Gibbons' luck to be in a radio-equipped lifeboat, in a storm . . . Unveiling of statues has become a feverish pastime of the broadcasters.

Hard to conceive of people listening to such ceremonies . . . Everything goes into the radio hopper these days. It's a dizzy world, that of the broadcaster. Wonder when they'll equip dirigibles with jazz bands . . . The canny Lombardo is back at the Roosevelt, welcoming the bright young people, sending "best wishes" by wire to captains of all college football teams. And Joe Moss is jazzing Chaminado at the Waldorf. Good old "Scarf Dance"! First aid to those maestros whose ambitions are above yo-do-des-os of Broaway. What inane phrases jazz has inspired—"Hot-cha-cha," "yo-do-doe-o," "ia-da."

KDKA Only Station Heard by Nautilus

Walter Evans and KDKA engineers are taking pats on the back after Lowell Thomas' revelation that this station was the only one in the world to be picked up by the submarine Nautilus on its recent attempt to explore the North Pole regions. Elsie Lichtenstul, KDKA stylist, says that she met the crew of the Nautilus in Sweden and listened to W8XK (short wave station of KDKA) for more than an hour one afternoon.

ESTATE
Gas Ranges

Bake with fresh air! Miss Celia S. Bush, Director of Home Service, Estate Stove Co., is here this week to show you how it is done on a new model Estate Gas Range.

Get perfect baking results every time. The Estate Fresh Air Oven is built on the same principal as a double-boiler—a double wall all around insures uniform heat distribution on all sides, top and bottom. Extra heavy insulation keeps the heat where it belongs—in the oven. A blessing to the cook on hot days and a gas-saving point every day.

Cookery Timer Gratis

During the demonstration we will give gratis, with every New Model Therm-Estate controlled Estate Range sold, a Hawkeye Clock and Cookery Timer. The bell rings when cooking time is up.

8-STATE MEET TO STABILIZE COAL URGED

West Virginia Operators Ask Parley; Governor Scouts Martial Law

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Upon recommendation of Gov. William G. Conley a conference of West Virginia coal operators decided yesterday to seek a general conference of operators from eight competitive states to discuss stabilization of the coal industry.

A committee of three was appointed to request the National Coal Association to appoint representative committees of operators for the purpose from West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois.

ALL-DAY PARLEY

The action was taken during an all-day conference of a score of operators which was called by Gov. Conley for a general discussion of the coal situation.

Gov. Conley, at the beginning of his statement to the operators, pointed out that coal gives direct employment to 100,000 men in the state and that it was estimated four times that number are directly dependent upon it and an equal number indirectly.

The trials and tribulations of the coal industry in recent months, he said, have been accentuated by the "devastating world-wide depression," and while all other forms of industry likewise have been depressed, "there exists in the public mind a belief that the coal industry could better its own condition if closer cooperation within the industry could be obtained." He added:

"Some have suggested and even urged curtailment of production by martial law, which, in my opinion, would be in contravention of the Constitution of this state and of the United States. So long as I am Governor of West Virginia, those engaged in the coal industry and those engaged in any other industry may be assured that my consent will not be given to such methods, or to any other illegal method which violates the rights of ownership in private property."

DISCUSSES WAGES

Discussing wages, Gov. Conley said:

"I am taking the liberty of expressing the opinion that it is wrong to cut the wages of miners below a living and reasonable surplus wage in order to meet cut-throat competition, and thus allow the consumer of your product to profit at the expense of yourselves and your employes. Under this and preceding administrations it has been an established policy to protect property and those who seek to work, but I want to impress upon you that this administration is not in sympathy with wage reductions that make it impossible for wage workers to maintain the American standard of living."

Co-Eds Divided On Boy Friends' Nickel Sodas

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—University of Missouri co-eds may be satisfied with nickle sodas when they are having dates with their boy friends, but at Northwestern University it's a different story.

The girls of Delta Gamma met yesterday to decide whether they should adopt a resolution similar to one passed by members of that sorority at Missouri, pledging to limit themselves to a soda fountain bill of 5 cents, and the answer was "No."

Miss Helen Collings, president of the sorority, said:

"The boys seems to have money enough and we don't believe they would like it if we adopted the economy rule."

CURTIUS QUITS GERMAN POST

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Foreign Minister Julius Curtius, whose policies have been the center of repeated political storms, today submitted his resignation to Chancellor Bruening. Official circles understood it would be accepted.

His withdrawal was considered as a removal of one of the difficult obstacles facing Chancellor Bruening in obtaining the parliamentary support the government will need when the Reichstag convenes October 13.

With the Social Democrats restless over wage reductions, the continual outbursts of dissatisfaction with Curtius from parties supporting the government made the cabinet's position acutely embarrassing. The ill-fated Austro-German customs treaty was regarded as having contributed more than any other one thing to the situation leading to the foreign minister's resignation.

VETERAN RELIEF PARLEY SET

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—President Hoover today approved plans for a seven-day conference of veterans' administration officials here designed to secure economy and expedite "direct relief to the veterans of all wars." The conference will begin October 26.

Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, said after a conference at the White House that Mr. Hoover approved of the move, which was designed also to devise "ways and means to simplify the procedure of the combined activities represented in the veterans' administration."

The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Hines said, will be invited to the conference.

Noon-day Services Begin Tomorrow

Pimples in Blotches Over Face. Healed by Cuticura.

"For about five years I was troubled with pimples that broke out in blotches all over my face. They were red and both large and small, and festered and scaled over. The itching and burning caused me to scratch, and I could not sleep well at times on account of the irritation.

"I used other remedies but without success. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was completely healed in about six or eight weeks after using five boxes of Cuticura Ointment and four cakes of Cuticura Soap." (Signed) James L. Shultz, Box 149, Foxburg, Pa.

Soap 25c, Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

Wife Struck Him, Divorce Seeker Says

His wife knocked him unconscious by wielding a large glass candelabra, struck him on the head with a baseball bat on another occasion and hit him with her fist when she met him leaving work with a woman employe, Paul R. McCully, 5908 Rural street, averred in his bill of particulars in Common Pleas Court. He asked a divorce from Olive J. McCully, 1148 Portland street, on grounds of cruelty and indignities.

They were married October 7, 1918, and parted last November, his wife refusing to live anywhere but with her mother, he said. A week after their marriage his wife and mother insisted upon reminding him of the many opportunities she had to marry wealth, he averred.

ALL IN A DAY

Story of a Nobody

JENKINS is a nobody. Thousands of people pass him every day and they never consider him as anything else. He has but one arm, and he sells papers to those who would buy. His stand is in a fairly advantageous spot, and he manages to eke out a livelihood. A few customers know him as Jenkins, but most of them call him by any name that happens to pop into their minds.

He is, in other words, of no consequence at all in this world. On some future morning, a new face will appear at the newsstand. Some of the customers will notice the change.

"What's become of that other fellow?" they will ask. "You know, the man with one arm?"

The new paper seller will shrug his shoulders.

"Kicked off," he will reply laconically. "Died last night."

The customers will shake their heads.

"Tch, tch, tch," they will murmur. "So he's dead, eh? Too bad. Give me an Evening Journal."

And that will be all. Because Jenkins is a nobody.

As usual, back we go some 20 years. Now we find a very different Jenkins. He is young, personable and ambitious. He is employed as a bank clerk in one of the better institutions and is highly regarded by his superiors. Somewhere there is a pretty girlie about whom he is slightly daffy, and she seems to be just as interested as he. All of which meant that there was no depression outlook for the Jenkins of 20 years ago.

Well, as a phrase you might add to your famous last words, he married the girl. Five years later he was the father of a baby girl. He now held a better position in the bank and was looked upon as a great prospect in his immediate banking circle. What more, you will ask, can a man desire? I don't know, but if you asked Jenkins, he would certainly tell you that he wished his wife wouldn't be so terribly extravagant.

For reasons known to herself, Mrs. Jenkins had developed social ambitions. Having popped up from nowhere herself, she couldn't realize that social climbing never exercised anything but the pocketbook. She began to throw parties and to surround herself with as many bankrupt celebrities as could be lured to her home with the promise of a square meal and a bottle of wine.

All this was very nice. Jenkins loved his wife to have a good time and he rather like the celebrities on his own accord. But the expense was something else again.

He wanted very much to speak to his spouse and ask her to cut down. But, if the truth be known, he was just a trifle afraid to begin. He loved her so devotedly, you see, that he wouldn't want to hurt her for anything in the world. After all, he told himself, money was so insignificant when compared to her. He didn't realize that he had developed a philosophy that has wrecked more homes than husbands who eat crackers in bed.

Once more we hurdle several years in a row. Although Jenkins has been doing a great deal of conniving in order to make both ends shake hands, he hasn't lost caste in his office. He is now an official of the bank, and is earning far more money than before. And just to balance the scales, of course, his wife is spending that much more.

More than that, Mrs. Jenkins had reached the stage where she was informing her meal ticket what a bust he had turned out to be. Morning after morning, she handed him a none too polite lecture.

"You call yourself a good husband!" she would cry. "Humph! How is it that all my friends have new cars this year, and I'm still running around in last year's model? Is that the way you express your love for me? You ought to be ashamed of yourself.

"What's the matter with you, anyhow? Why do you let other men make all the money? Haven't you any backbone?

"I'd advise you to begin to get smart. Go out like any other red-blooded man and do something in the world."

In the end, Jenkins did something. Year after year of money demands and lectures finally wore away his resistance. He began to play the market in an effort to put himself on easy street. His own funds being on a par with a reporter's bankroll, he "borrowed" a little from the bank in order to speculate. You know the type of reasoning he employed:

"I'll take just this much . . . Nobody will ever know . . . As soon as that stock gains a few points I'll replace the money and take a nice profit . . . After all, the tip is a good one . . . How can I lose?"

You'd be surprised to know how many bank officials have followed the same ideas, and how many of them have got away with it. Jenkins was one of those who didn't make the grade. On a fatal day he was nailed with a beautiful shortage. And they took him to a place that has plenty of cages, but no paying-tellers.

His wife gave him the air in expert fashion. When she asked for a divorce, he gave it to her immediately. With everything gone, there was nothing he could do but to plead guilty. He did so. And they gave him a 10-year stretch in an up-state prison.

Funny think about Jenkins. He didn't blame his wife for anything that had happened. More than that, he didn't blame himself. All of his troubles he traced to Wall street. He blamed the stock market for everything that had happened to him. As the years went by, the thing became an obsession with him. He did nothing but blame Wall street for his fate.

After some eight years in jail, Jenkins was a changed man. His mentality wasn't of the best and his health was broken. One afternoon, as he worked in the prison machine shop, something happened to him. He felt dizzy. His eyes closed. He lurched forward. And when he came to one of his arms was gone.

The state felt very sorry for poor Jenkins. The state can always manage to feel sorry when it faces a splendid lawsuit. So Jenkins found himself released in short order. More than that, through a local politician, he was given a stand to sell papers in a fairly advantageous spot. All this, you understand, on the agreement that the former bank official was to forget any lawsuit.

The politician gave Jenkins some expert advice when he turned the spot over to him.

"I know all about your case," he chirped, "and it sure is a tough one. But the world goes on, my man—and so must you. All you've got to do is to forget that you hate Wall street. Forget it altogether. You got plenty of time to live yet. Sure. Everything's gonna be okay."

Thus you have the story of a nobody. There's just one little touch I forgot to add. Jenkins arrives at his stand every day around noon. And the first papers they hand him are all marked:

"Wall Street Edition."...

When children "simply won't eat"—
When they just won't gain weight—
Fatten them this way—

A Pound a Week

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little fig syrup will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Not to correct this is inexcusable. It is so easy to do, if you will only use the "California treatment." Read what it is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

Begin Tonight!

Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure fig syrup to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. It might take a month, but you can positively wean the child away from constipation and need of cathartics. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, fig syrup will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California fig syrup will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food, digest it, gain weight and strength.

There's just one IF

The marvelous things you hear and read about California fig syrup are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA fig syrup. Don't accept any bottle that doesn't say CALIFORNIA.

Funeral Party Goes Direct To Penn Avenue Home; Services Set for Tomorrow

Accompanied by her daughter and son, Miss Helen Clay Frick and Childs Frick, the body of Mrs. Adelaide Howard Childs Frick, 71, widow of Henry Clay Frick, steel magnate, reached Pittsburgh early today from Prides Crossing, Mass., where death Sunday claimed the life of one of Pittsburgh's most noted residents.

The body reached Pittsburgh in a special car over the Pennsylvania Railroad at 7:46 a. m. The car was detached and was shunted to a siding in the Dallas avenue yards, from where the casket was taken to the Frick home at Penn and South Homewood avenues. Funeral services will be held from the Frick home tomorrow morning at 11 a. m., and burial will be in Homewood Cemetery.

The illness preceding the death of Mrs. Frick was short. She was stricken Wednesday with a heart attack and died Sunday without regaining consciousness. Her son and daughter and a small group of other relatives were at the bedside when the end came.

Prior to the departure from Massachusetts a brief funeral service was held yesterday afternoon at the Frick summer mansion, Eagle Rock, in charge of the Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, of St. John's Episcopal Church, Beverly Farms.

Immediately upon the arrival of the train in Dallas avenue yards, Miss Helen Frick, heavily veiled, left the train. Her brother, Childs Frick, and Mrs. Frick remained on the train and disembarked in East Liberty. Miss Frick was met by Pittsburgh representatives of the Frick estate and rushed to an awaiting automobile to be taken home. A detail of police screened her from the eyes of the curious as she walked the short distance to the automobile. A short time later the casket bearing the body of Mrs. Frick was loaded into an awaiting ambulance.

VICTIM SHOOTS WHEN GUNMEN BLOCK ROAD

One Thug Believed Hit by Bullet as Pistol Fight Foils Holdup; 2 Arrested

Harry K. Alexander, 38, confectioner, of 6200 Broad street, shot it out with three holdup men, who blocked his path in Hulton road, near the Oakmont Country Club, early this morning.

He reported to East End police that one of the holdup men, apparently shot in the stomach and doubled with pain, was lifted into the bandits' car, which sped away, one of the party firing at Alexander's car.

A bullet crashed through the windshield of the latter car and either glass or a bullet plowed a furrow along the side of Alexander's head.

GIRL FAINTS AT GUNPLAY

Miss Lou Clark, who, Alexander said, was his companion, crouched in the bottom of his car and fainted as the shooting began.

Alexander said he and Miss Clark were about to turn in Hulton road at 2 a. m. today, when the other car appeared and blocked their path. One of the men from the other car ran toward Alexander with a drawn revolver. When close by the bandit fired, Alexander said, the bullet striking the door of his car. Drawing his own revolver, Alexander said, he stepped to the running board and opened fire.

SUSPECTS ARRESTED

At the first shot the man doubled and clutched his stomach with his hands. Two companions hurried to his side, supported him back to the car, and then opened fire on Alexander, a bullet piercing the windshield.

The bandits fled, according to Alexander, and he attempted to follow, but was outdistanced. Returning to East End, he reported the shooting to the police and then discovered that he had been injured.

Alexander refused to further identify his companion. County detectives were notified and sent out a description of the men. New Kensington police early today arrested two suspects in an automobile.

Plenty of Guns But Not Quite So Many Gunmen

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

When New York canceled 185,000 gun permits it sort of gave the state a bad name.

Sounds like a lot of gunmen. But we're proud to say that it ain't as bad as you thought.

Some of the boys carried two and three. And a bird captured on Long Island brought the ratio way down. He was packing seven.

So you can see we are really a peaceful community. Kind to the old folks, courteous to strangers and just adore babies and flowers.

Those 185,000 pistols were not a sign of lawlessness. They just came in handy in case somebody spoke out of turn or criticized the wallpaper.

Why, we almost missed that lecture on porcelain of the Ming dynasty at Town Hall last night because grandma had to run back home for her Luger automatic.

The old gal is getting absent-minded.

Historical Society Displays Pittsburgh Pioneers' Relics

Unusual Exhibit Open to Public First Time

Many relics of a historical nature are being displayed to the public for the first time today in the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania at Bigelow Boulevard and Parkman avenue.

One of the oldest is a piano which dates to 1719. The ancient instrument was brought over the mountains on the backs of mules and presented by Gen. Richard Butler to his daughter, Mary. It was given to the society by Isaac Meason Sowers and Mrs. Gertrude Sowers McCalmont, a great-great grandaughter of Gen. Butler.

INDIAN FIGHTER

Gen. Butler, noted in Pittsburgh as an Indian trader and Indian agent, lived in a log house on the east side of Marbury, now Third street, one door south of Penn street, now Penn avenue. He was second in command to Gen. Anthony Wayne at Stony Point and to Gen. Daniel Morgan at Saratoga.

He was Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County and the first lieutenant of the County in command of the militia. He was a member of the General Assembly and was killed during St. Clair's expedition against the Indians on the Miami River on November 4, 1791. Butler County was named for him.

ANCIENT SPINNER

Another old piece is an automatic spinner of unknown age from Shannon Roberts, Ligonier Township, Westmoreland County. It came originally from Somerset County and was presented to the society by Charles L. Armor, of Laughlintown, Pa.

Among the Civil War relics there is a drum used by Company C, 193rd Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, raised in Pittsburgh and quartered at Camp Howe, now the Oakland district. Sixty-seven years after the organization of the company, the drum was returned to its original "camp ground" and was loaned to the society by Taylor H. Beech, of Wilkinsburg.

DIRECTOR GIVES LACK OF WORK AS REASON

Substantial Savings Also Seen in Plan to Merge Division With Engineers

The city Bureau of Bridges and Structures would be abolished if Council passes legislation proposed by the Public Works Department, Councilman W. Y. English said today.

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang asked that the bureau be abolished and its activities centered as a division of the Bureau of Engineering. Economy and lack of work for the bureau are given as reasons by Lang for the request.

How many city employes in the bureau would lose their jobs was not divulged by Lang. George Stevenson is head of the bureau.

Under the reorganization plan the department would be known as the Division of Bridges and Structures with a division engineer at an annual salary of $5,000. Stevenson's salary is more than $6,000, according to Public Works Department figures. Annual expenses now are $82,824, but under the reorganization, reductions in personnel and operating expenses would bring this figure down to $48,903 per year, it was said.

Activities of the division would be to repair and maintain some 150 small bridges and spans over viaducts and the three big river bridges—Smithfield Street, Manchester and South Twenty-second Street. Many of the large spans formerly maintained by the city have been taken over by Allegheny County.

The bureau was formed in 1926 following authorization of a large bond issue for bridge work. This money has been spent and at present, according to the Public Works Department, there are no large projects under construction and no indications there will be any for several years.

Federal Action Not Needed This Year But Might Be In 1932, Hungry Club Told

A federal appropriation for unemployment relief should come as a last resort and should not be necessary this winter, Rowland Haynes, trustee of the Association of Community Chests and Councils, told members of the Hungry Club yesterday, speaking on the work of the President's organization on unemployment relief. He said:

"A federal appropriation would dry up local resources and efforts. It might be wastefully spent because federal authorities are remote from the local situations.

"The years 1933 and 1934 may be heavy relief years. I believe that with local resources we can get by this winter. If there should be another hard winter, some sort of federal aid might be necessary. A federal appropriation this year is likely to be dangerous, is probably not necessary, and may be needed next year."

America should not imitate the German or English dole systems, Haynes declared, but should work out a method or solution based on American traditions.

Reliance on private charity, on some method of utilizing and capitalizing the concern of employer for employe, of getting industry to care for the stable group of workers, is part of the solution, he said. Development of work, instead of charity, is an essential part of the American plan, as contrasted to the European dole, he said.

The oldest volume on display is a Book of Martyrs containing records of those who perished "in the name of Christianity from the time of Christ to 1660." It was collected from reliable chronicles, reports and witnesses, and originally published in the Dutch language by T. J. V. Braght. It was translated into German and published by the Brotherhood of Ephrata in Lancaster County, Pa., in 1748. The brotherhood had its own printing plant and binding establishment. This book was presented to the society by the late Dr. Frank C. Sawers, of Swissvale.

WHARF PARKING HEARING SET

With a hearing scheduled tomorrow, City Council today had on file a complaint from the William Penn Garage protesting operation of the wharves for parking places, and another from a taxpayer, indorsing the city's parking plan.

J. J. Leahy, president of the William Penn Parking Garage, joined the Pittsburgh Parking Garages, the McCann Company and others in protesting continuance of the wharf parking business on grounds that it interfered with private enterprises.

Parking garages, Leahy said, are operating at half capacity.

A. H. Meth, of 319 Third avenue, informed Council it was "for the best interests of all concerned," for the city to beautify and improve the Monongahela and Allegheny River wharves.

LEGAL PHASES DISCUSSED AT MEET

Round Table Brings Out Variety of Claims Paid; Double Indemnity Scored

The jazz age is over and the time has come for life insurance companies to use the language of the street in writing their policies so that any layman may understand what he is buying, William McKinley, general counsel of the Old Colony Life Insurance Company of Chicago, told the legal section of the American Life convention today at the William Penn Hotel. He said:

"There is no reason why life insurance policy should not be as clear as a promisory note.

Attorney McKinley expressed this opinion at the close of a discussion of various legal cases in which the entry of infectious germs into body through a small cut would had been considered an accident under the double indemnity clause.

Suicides are frequently paid for as accidents, it was brought out by the Hon. Frank W. McAllister, general counsel of the Kansas City Life Insurance Company, in conducting the round table discussion following McKinley's speech. He declared that the existing double indemnity clause will have to be entirely reframed if the companies are to avoid paying for suicides at accident rates.

Further discussions scheduled today include an address on "Federal Interpleader Suits," by Attorney Julius C. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., and talks by Lewis Stebbins, of Chicago, and Francis V. Keesling, of San Francisco.

or COLD if you please

IF the autumn morning is crisp and clear, serve Shredded Wheat Hot. It's simple enough. Just pour hot milk over the biscuits instead of cold. You can't serve a better way. It doesn't cool while you're serving it—hot milk holds its warmth.

If the day promises the warmth of Indian Summer, serve Shredded Wheat with cool milk. Just heat the biscuits to retain their crispness, and add bananas or other fruit, if you like, then serve with milk or cream.

Which ever way you serve Shredded Wheat, the result is the same. A delicious, healthful breakfast, easily served and warmly appreciated by every member of the family.

Poking Fun at Hollywood, 'Once in a Lifetime' Gets 1,000 Laughs

By GEORGE SEIBEL

They ought to make a talking picture out of "Once in a Lifetime," the Hollywood comedy seen at the Alvin Theater last night. A talking picture about the talkies would surely be welcomed by all the millions of film fans who hunger and thirst for the truth about Hollywood. Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman have slightly exaggerated things, but it would be easy to exaggerate them a little more and make an artistic super-picture. But would it seem funny out in Hollywood? Was it intended to be funny even on Broadway?

George Seibel.

The two playwrights—one a man who knows the screen world, the other one who knows the stage world—have taken a fairy tale and a comic strip, hooked them onto a timely topic, and produced a hilarious comedy, or rather a spectacular farce.

Ten years from now it will not be understood—some of it is already beginning to date. But just now it is as tasty as a buckwheat cake fresh from the griddle, and as easily comprehensible.

A budding member of the Owen Davis tribe came along with a play to debunk Hollywood about a year ago. It tried to be serious and flopped. This one never stops laughing—and neither does the audience.

IS THERE A PLOT?

If anybody inquires whether there is a plot shout No! Not enough to get in the way of the characters anyhow. Those characters are the rarest assortment of comic howlers stuffed into three acts.

Hugh O'Connell, as the vaudeville nitwit who goes to Hollywood and becomes the great Dr. Lewis by a series of accidents, chief of which is that he produces the wrong film and makes a star of the most awkward amateur actress, is one of these characters—and in telling what he does the story of the play has already been told.

But it is embellished with a hundred little contributory incidents that illuminate the main text. Just before the curtain falls he has bought 2,000 airplanes, because a clever salesman gave him one free, and his easy stupidity starts a new fad on the screen.

It may not be as easy as that, but remember that Will Rogers gets his funniest quips just by reading the Congressional Record.

REST OF THE GANG

Around O'Connell revolve a dozen others who stir riotous laughter. Charles Halton, as Glogauer, the movie magnate is probably the most amusing and effective, but Granville Bates as the hard-swearing movie bishop, gets even louder laughs. Marjorie Wood, as Helen Hobart, the movie columnist, and Ruthelma Stevens, as Miss Leighton, present beautiful types of oleaginous feminine vacuity.

And the one seriously sketched character, the playwright who comes to Hollywood and then is forgotten by everybody except the messenger who delivers his salary checks, is played by Robert Barratt with savagely tragic humor.

It is a grand picture of that world where there's no time wasted in thinking, where the Civil War is a picture shot by D. W. Griffith, and where they'll produce a drama of the French Revolution when they can get somebody to play the guillotine.

MANY ANGLES OF VIEW

It is apt to leave a contemptuous sneer in the back of our minds as we feel sympathy with the vaudeville actress so accurately played by Jean Dixon. It is apt to engender the thought that here is every joke and wisecrack about the movies strung together into a play, with 39 characters and seven scenes.

That doesn't matter at all. We may believe it or not—we'll laugh just the same. And if the script should be turned into a scenario and sent to the new Gold Coast, perhaps Mr. Glogauer will snap it up and make a super-production because at last justice has been done to a noble art.

Even Gasoline Is Perfume Of Love

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Another charming German operetta is at the Avenue Cinema this week, and proves that the romantic soul of the Germans can extract melody and make love philters even from the fumes of gasoline. "Die Drei von der Tankstelle" means "The Trio of the Service Station," and concerns the romance of three young happy-go-luckies who go broke, and sell their auto to start a gasoline station.

Their best customer is pretty Lillian Harvey, who has a very sweet voice and some very dainty music to sing. She doesn't know which of the three men she likes best, but finally realizes that she loves Willy Fritsch, who has a very winning way and also a very rich voice.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"East Wind" premieres tonight in the Nixon. It is Schwab & Mandel's new musical show, starring J. Harold Murray, Charlotte Lansing and Joe Penner. Matinayers will have their days tomorrow and Saturday.

Play debuts in the Nixon are the regular thing these days, and the next to bow in will do so no later than next Monday, when Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt will meet first-nighters in "Reunion in Vienna," comedy by Robert E. Sherwood. It is the first of the Theater Guild's subscription series.

The first Guild play of the season and the first of the Professional Players impinge upon each other, that of the latter being "Mrs. Moonlight," coming next Monday to the Alvin, with Edith Barrett and Sir Guy Standing as the co-stars. "Mrs. Moonlight" was authored by Benn W. Levy, who evidently likes odd titles. His previous play was "Art and Mrs. Bottle." Make your own puns on Moonlight and Bottle. No prizes, however.

Play Games In Warner Jungle

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"East of Borneo," infested with crocodiles and melodrama, opened yesterday on the Warner screen. And pity the poor crocodiles! Charles Bickford, the he-man hero, whacks them right and left with a boat oar.

The story has to do with a cultured lady, portrayed by Rose Hobart, who braves the jungles to search for her doctor-husband. This husband, believing she was in love with another man, walked out on her years before the action of the film begins.

The husband is seen in the role of a court physician in as incongruous a kingdom as you'd ever hope to see. Buried in the middle of the jungle, the royal family, consisting of one member, sits around all day, playing chess with his physician or feeding persons he dislikes to the crocodiles.

RACE WITH CROCODILES

One scene, where an unhappy victim tries to outswim the crocodiles, is quite thrilling, but it leaves you with the funniest feeling in the pit of your stomach.

The physician is a Joe Morgan transplanted to jungle environment. He isn't a bit glad to see his wife. "Go away," he says. But the dispairing lady can't go away if she desires to. The sinister one-man royal family wants her for himself.

THE VOLCANO SPOUTS

Now comes a sober moment, and the husband gets gallant. He'll rescue his fair wife. And the melodramatics get off to a new start, with an erupting volcano as the punch-climax. This makes for the spectacular sight of jungle beasts fleeing from the wrath of nature.

"East of Borneo" is adventurous melodrama. It has some interesting animal "shots." But it has too many inconsistencies! Such things as supposedly veteran natives anchoring a raft beneath trees so that jungle cats and snakes can conviently pounce or slide down on top of them, must be taken with at least a grain of salt—maybe two grains.

She Marries, Lives to Regret

"Secrets of a Secretary" came to both the Davis and the Enright screens yesterday. In substance, it is the story of a poor little rich girl, who marries a gigolo on the spur of the moment and lives to regret it.

Claudette Colbert is the heroine. Her father dies, leaving her penniless, so her spur-of-the-moment husband ups and leaves her. Then she gets a job as a social secretary in a home where she used to be a socialite herself.

In the meantime, husband gets himself set as a dancer in a night club. And who do you suppose tumbles for him in that big way? None other than the daughter of social secretary's employer. And this daughter is engaged to marry a Lord Something-or-Other from London.

Well, Lord Something-or-Other finds he'd rather marry the social secretary. But he's a gentleman and he can't break a gentleman's agreement, even though his bride-to-be is "crazy about" the gigolo.

Naturally, with such complications as these there is bound to be melodrama. A fellow is murdered and it looks for all the world like our heroine did it. But Lord Something- or-Other knows instinctively that she could do no wrong. Through his efforts everything turns out like Hollywood has been turning it out for years.

Supporting players include Herbert Marshall and George Metaxa. They're new ones to us.

Two words will summarize this film: Mild entertainment.

THEATER PESTS ARRESTED

Seven alleged theater mashers were arrested by city detectives last night as they inaugurated a campaign against men who annoy unescorted women in downtown theaters. In Morals Court the seven, pleading not guilty, were fined $10 or 10 days in jail by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones.

The arrests were made by Policewomen Ida Rickenbrode and Nellie McDonald, who testified the actions of the men were objectionable. Inspector Frank R. Boyd, under whose orders the "cleanup" was launched, said from 18 to 20 complaints had been made to theaters daily by women who were molested by men.

The seven fined were: William Schrader, 26, of 129 Ravine street, Munhall; Clarence Powell, 45, 3915 Riddle street; John Rocko, 38, of 1216½ Webster avenue; Chester Schulman, 23, of 219 Dinwiddie street; R. The funeral started from the home of his brother-in-law, Henry Atkinson, Delafield road, Aspinwall. Relatives and a small number of close friends attended. The interment was made in St. Mary's Cemetery.

MEYER JONASSON'S

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Even though the weather is delightfully reminiscent of the good old summer time, winter debuts are really not far off.

Among these will be that of Anne Wyant, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, of Greensburg, Pa., who will be presented to Washington society at a ball her father and mother will give Christmas Eve at the Mayflower Hotel.

Anne will not return to Smith College until February. Just now she is with her family at Greensburg.

Very amusing is the exhibit of oil paintings by Joseph Pollett in the Junior League rooms. The exhibit opened yesterday you know, and continues through October 17. The artist was born in Switzerland in 1897.

Pollett Exhibit

He has exhibited in all the important art galleries in the United States, including the Carnegie International, where he won honorable mention in 1929. Among prominent people who have a private collection of Pollett's works are Mrs. Julianna B. Force, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Dr. B. D. Saklatwaller. The artist won the Guggenheim Scholarship in 1931.

"Once in a Lifetime" appearing at the Alvin this week attracted many of the faithful first-nighters as usual last night. The William A. Duckhams, were there, and Mrs. Duckham was wearing a gown in her favorite color, red, fashioned of satin, moulded to the figure to below the hipline, where it fell to the floor in a flurry of godets.

Seen at Theater

She wore a brief white bunny jacket.

The Raymond Ford Morelands, too. I noticed arriving at the theater and Mrs. Moreland had chosen a smart afternoon frock of black crepe with white lingerie touches at the wrists and neckline. Mrs. William Penn Snyder, chatting in the foyer, was wearing a stunning gown of black velvet, with a knee-length wrap of black velvet furred with white fox. I also noticed the Oliver Kaufmanns.

Club Baby Introduces Mother as President

The club baby, Miss Margaret Jean McLallen, who was adopted as such when news reached the club of her birth, introduced her mother, Mrs. James I. McLallen, when the latter took office as president of the Wilkinsburg Woman's Club yesterday. About 200 members and guests attended the opening reception of the club in the Y. W. C. A. Community House and thoroughly enjoyed the artistic musical program given by Miss Ann Vernon Root—her first Pittsburgh recital, by the way. Miss Root gave three groups, French, early American and autumn songs in costume.

Mrs. W. C. Graham, retiring president, received with Mrs. McLallen, both wearing black velvet gowns with small black hats. The tea table was beautiful, with dahlias and candles in the club colors, lavender and white.

DESIGNER SHOWS NEWEST MODE IN FALL MILLINERY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Oct. 6. — No need for history lessons with the nicest, newest hats. For they are really new, ultra-modern with a rakishness that is all their own and very much of this era. Of course there are some women who insist on finding a Rembrandt inspiration about any hat with a one-sided tam-o-shanter crown, but the average woman does not care to mix art or history with her sartorial effects. She is quite content with geography in the form of the Russian, Persian, Algerian or Chinese influence. And certainly the East has had quite a play during the exposition here, and all women visitors have immensely enjoyed the valuable lessons in the use of color that has been vouchsafed them through the medium of the costumes and native scenes. But to get back to hats and other delectable necessities. The cold, rainy weather that has been part of the summer here has helped to restore felt to its place in the millinery world, but nothing can budge velvet as the ideal medium for the afternoon or dressy hat.

TODAY WE HAVE sent two sketches of a grand little hat by Bruyere. The soft, tam crown is former of three layers of felt, superimposed, each cut out in a circular opening at the center. Under the crown is a close, shallow cape of the same felt. Two fat tassels of gilt cord are nipped to the outermost layer at the side of the crown. The hat is bright green.

SEA MAIL PLANE FEARED LOST

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 6.—The crash of a plane believed to be the ship-to-shore New York, carrying mail from the liner Bremen was reported today by William Faulkner, light keeper at Bur Coat.

Whizzing along in the darkness, the craft was heard to come down heavily on Cobequid bay, he said. An explosion followed and cries echoed over the bay, but when Faulkner and other rescuers rowed out on to the bay they could find no trace of men or plane.

A mail plane manned by Friob Simon, pilot and Rudolph Wauchknecht, mechanic, took off from the North German Lloyd liner Bremen yesterday when she was 0 miles off Cape Race, N. F., an attempt to get the mail to New York 29 hours faster than liner could reach there. Flying blind through fog and inst headwinds, they reached ney, N. S., last night, and took he air again about midnight.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A bus of the Pennsylvania Greyhound Bus Company which police said was stolen for a joy ride today crashed into a retaining wall around a ventilator for the underground tracks of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, knocking down bricks and masonry which damaged signals and the tracks below.

John Praisig, 21, found in the driver's seat was held on charges of driving while intoxicated, larceny of the bus, reckless driving, driving without a license.

PAIR CONVICTED IN PLOT KILLING

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. Rose Veres, 48, and her son, William, 18, were found guilty of first degree murder last night by a jury which tried them for the death of Steve Mak, a roomer at Mrs. Verves' home, on whose life she carried insurance policies amounting to about $4,000.

The verdict, which carries a life imprisonment sentence, was returned after three hours' deliberation. The jurors said one of their number held out for acquittal until the jury examined the sash of a window the defense contended Mak was repairing when he fell to his death from the Veres attic August 23, and decided it had not been repaired and was not in need of repairs.

The state contended Mrs. Veres and her son pushed Mak to his death after attempts to poison him failed. Investigation of the death revealed 11 other men who had roomed at the Veres home died during the last eight years.

119 Students, Poison Victims, Recovering

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—All but eight of the 119 Purdue University students who were taken to hospitals Sunday night after suffering food poisoning were released today. The remaining eight were recovering.

ADAMS' ESTATE RUM GANG OUT

SCITUATE, Mass., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Three Boston men who cached 600 cases of liquor in a barn near the summer estate of Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, were freed last night in $2,500 bail each.

First reports that the barn was situate on the Adams estate were corrected later by police and Coast Guards.

The barn was situate on the land close to the border of the secretary's land. Police made the raid on the barn early yesterday after several automobiles passing to and from the direction of the barn had aroused their suspicions.

Shores near the Adams property have been used as a landing place for liquor previously.

By keeping the difference between what the farmer receives for food and what you pay for it as small as possible, we can sell food of the highest quality at very low prices.

For instance, last year it cost us $35.51 a ton to bring food from the people who grow it to the people who eat it. But this year we've been able to cut it down to $32.66. This one chip, alone, off the old expensive block is a saving to American housewives of about $300,000 every week.

ONLY 12 HITS OFF ACE IN THREE GAMES

IT WOULD BE giving Burleigh Grimes no more than he's due to rank him with the greatest money pitchers of all time. He doesn't hold a place among the most successful world series hurlers from the standpoint of victories. In fact, he has won only two games out of six pitched in post-season titular competition, and it took him 11 years to put over the second one, which he turned in yesterday to give the National League the first series lead it had enjoyed since 1926. But for consistently fine pitching Grimes has not been surpassed by any derby star since the days of Christy Mathewson.

Burleigh Grimes

Burleigh's two-year record against the A's is particularly impressive. His two-hit classic of yesterday was in keeping with his previous performances. In three games against the famed sluggers of Connie Mack in 1930-31, though he lost two of them, he allowed a total of only 12 hits, and if there has been anything in recent years to beat that it doesn't come readily to mind.

IN EACH OF the two games he lost to the White Elephants last year, Grimes yielded only five safeties, and the two yesterday made it an even dozen in three encounters with one of the hardest hitting clubs of modern baseball. George Earnshaw allowed 15 in the three games he pitched last year. In one of the contests he worked only seven innings. In 1905 Mathewson gave up 14 hits in pitching three shutouts.

Only six other flingers ever held a club to two hits, the derby record. Ed Reulbach, Ed Walsh and Three-finger Brown did it in 1906, Eddie Plank in 1913, Bill James in 1914, and Waite Hoyt in 1921. Opposing Hoyt in 1921, Art Nehf allowed only three hits, and that total of only five hits by both clubs still stands as the world series low record for one game.

UP TO TODAY, the wide pitching edge originally doped out in favor of the A's had not shown itself in the records. The Cards had batted .280 in three games against Grove and Earnshaw, with Mahaffey pitching one inning, whereas the St. Louis flingers had held the Mackmen to a sticking average of only .170, and had piled up 24 strikeouts, an average of eight to a game.

Until Simmons hit his homer in the ninth yesterday, the famed Mackian attack had not been able to score a run against the Cardinal pitchers in 18 consecutive innings. On the other hand, the Cards had beaten Earnshaw and Grove in two successive games, something not accomplished since June 11 and 12, 1930, when Cleveland registered a pair of wins over the two Philadelphia aces.

SPORTING A BATTING average of .636 up to today, John Leonard Martin had continued to be the sensation of the series. During an exhibition game between the Cards and the A's last spring in the South, Martin, after watching Grove in action, remarked to Manager Street on the bench that he felt sure he could hit the great southpaw. Street sent him in and he reached Lefty for two line singles. In the present series Martin has faced Grove eight times and combed him for five hits, besides making two more off Earnshaw. It's a case of a mere rookie dominating a world series. Martin's great work has counted for more than it represented in itself in the box scores. He has been an inspiration to his team mates, and the influence of his brilliant performances has filled the others with pep and confidence, having a helpful effect all along the line.

Al Simmons

AS WAS SHOWN by his homerun wallops in the first and third game, there is no telling when Al Simmons is going to cut loose, and that great player is dynamite any time he gets hold of a ball, but in a general batting sense so far the American League champion batter has not been getting fat on National League pitching.

Those two homers were the only hits Simmons got in the first three games, and in 12 times at bat he was held to an average of only .167. Al needs two more homers to equal the record for one series. Babe Ruth made four against the Cards in seven games in 1926, and Lou Gehrig tied the mark against the same club in four games in 1928.

ONLY EXCEPTIONAL PITCHING has enabled the Cubs to get even a fifty-fifty break with the tailend White Sox in the Chicago city series, which now stands deadlocked at three victories for each side.

In the three games they won, the Bruins scored a total of only six runs, the scores being 1 to 0, 2 to 1, and 3 to 2. The seventh and deciding battle is on the bills for today.

WHEN UNION COLLEGE was beaten 51 to 0 by Columbia last Saturday it wound up a long football series with an unusual record. These colleges are not to meet after this year. They played 13 games since their first meeting in 1899, and in all that time Union never made a touchdown. The Union gridders managed to win one game, that of 1916, but that was a field goal victory by a 3-to-0 score. In none of the 13 contests did they ever succeed in carrying the ball across the Lions' goal line.

A STRANGE SCENE that showed a veteran football coach congratulating a losing squad was enacted in the Carnegie Tech's field house after the 10-to-7 setback at the hands of W. & J. last Saturday in the second football game of the Stadium season.

Judge Steffen was so pleased with the showing of the Tartans, in the face of a series of blows that would have shaken the morale of a much more experienced aggregation, that he paid his club the tribute of calling it well on the way toward becoming the greatest fighting eleven in Carnegie history.

NOT A BEAR story came out of the Skibo camp before the W. & J. game, no reference to the crushing series of misfortunes that started before the Buffalo game with the ineligibility of Croft, the best tackle, and Burzio, the best guard, and ended three days prior to the W. & J. engagement with only one guard available.

Judge W. P. Steffen

But reports of those losses were proved true by the pitiably few substitutions made despite the terrific heat and the evident suffering of the players who had to go through 60 minutes of action.

ONLY 24 MEN were at Steffen's service for the W. & J. tilt. Heinzer, his best fullback, recovered from an injury just in time to get three days of work at guard before the game, and he played throughout the battle. Two of the surprising features of the struggle were the almost even punting duel between Wilson and Armentrout, where the W. & J. star had been figured easily to outdistance the inexperienced Carnegie captain, and the sudden flare-up of a Tartan passing game, which not even Steffen or Waddell had counted on. Armentrout kicked better than he had ever done before, even in practice. Dueger threw passes as he had never done before, and Potts and Ostrosky had never shown the skill as receivers they displayed. In paying such a sterling tribute to his club, even in defeat, Steffen said that never before had he seen so many men on one team play so far above their heads.

TECH LEAVES FOR GEORGIA THURSDAY

By JESS CARVER

There is going to be some taking apart and putting together on our local college football squads this week as the boys get set for a brace of first-rank testers this week-end. Pitt has West Virginia to prepare for, a Mountaineer eleven coached by the astute Greasy Neale; the Tartans must invade the South for a tussle with a vengeful Georgia Tech team, and the Dukes are up against a hot-shot in Cebe Ross' West Virginia Wesleyan Bobkitties here Friday night.

Warren Heller

Yesterday's drills were not overly strenuous at any of the practice fields. Pitt and the Dukes had triumphs back of 'em, and the Tartans contemplated the events of their defeat at the hands of Wash-Jeff, or rather, at the foot of Stew Wilson.

PITT CHECKS PLAYS

Coach Sutherland looked over the reports his scouts fetched back on West Virginia from New York and then checked over his own offense to the right, which with Pinny Heller toting the ball failed to click against Iowa on Saturday. Either there was an unexpected tough spot on the left side of the Hawkeye line or Heller was running with his eyes shut. Otherwise, Jock was well pleased with the way in which his charges performed.

It was remarkable the way the local lads staved off serious injuries in their tussles Saturday. Pitt and the Dukes came out of their tussles in excellent shape. There were the usual minor bumps and bruises, of course, but otherwise, all were in ship-shape. At Tech, Trainer Bert Munhall is working on the twisted leg acquired by Ike Lewis, sophomore end, and hopes to have the Washington (Pa.) lad in trim for the game against Georgia Tech.

The Tech squad will leave at 10 o'clock Thursday night for Cincinnati, arriving there at 7:45 the following morning and departing two hours later for Atlanta, which will be reached at 8:45 p. m. Friday, leaving time for a workout before the game.

The Tipoff

The chief concern this week of Mister Elmer Layden, of the Dukes, is a hefty young man from Buckhannon, Clifford (Gyp) Battles, as hard a running back as there is in the league. Gypper will be EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: SAWED OFF JAIL BARS WITH HIS SOCKS—Fred Tredwell, arrested for burglary and incarcerated in the Lyon County jail at Emporia, Kan., in 1899, spent two months of his time carrying out his scheme of escape. Tredwell wore home-made woolen socks which he raveled into yarn. He covered the yarn with soap and rolled it in sand and cement particles which he scraped from the cell walls. The sanded yarn acted as a rasp, and each night the prisoner drew the strand over the cell bars, eventually severing them completely. After his escape, he again was jailed and revealed his carefully laid and laboriously executed plan. DELMAR STEINBOCK AVERAGED 16 YARDS EVERY TIME HE CARRIED THE BALL—Steinbock, of Frederick (Okla.) High School, is considered a marvel in that state because of his ability on the gridiron. From a yannigan to quarterback in one season is the record of his rise. Never before a grid candidate, Steinbock reported for practice at the start of the 1930 season and in a few weeks played sensational football. During the season he carried the ball 81 times and averaged 16 yards per run.

PILOT EXPECTS A'S TO SHAKE SLUMP

By CONNIE MACK

Manager of the Athletics, Winners of Five World Titles

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—The Athletics fell to the Cardinals yesterday because they played better ball. We could do nothing with Burleigh Grimes until Al Simmons delivered his home run in the ninth to score two runs and keep us from being blanked, but that rally did not last long enough to do us any good.

Connie Mack

Then Lefty Grove, who won 31 games during the pennant season, was at no time himself. While he gave only one base on balls, his control was faulty, because he was so often in the hole.

Grove has pitched many games for us this year in which he probably did not pitch three called balls to a batsman during the game.

I want to make it plain, however, that Grove's failure to pitch as he usually does for us cannot be blamed on the finger he hurt in St. Louis. We are looking for no excuses. Grove certainly was not there yesterday, and that is all there is to it, yet I will be greatly surprised if he does not come back and beat St. Louis as he did on the first afternoon in St. Louis.

Grimes held us safe at all times. We had two chances to score before Simmons hit his homer in the ninth, but failed both times.

ADAMS PRAISED

Sparky Adams stopped us [illegible] the fifth, after Foxx had walk[illegible] when he overpowered a scree[illegible] from Miller's bat to make a [illegible] play at second.

Had that ball gone ea[illegible] might have been different. [illegible] little Sparky is an artist on g[illegible] balls, and he certainly looke[illegible] on this one.

The breaks were again[illegible] even if it took us eight i[illegible] before we could make a h[illegible] Grimes. We gave an ind[illegible] of our power when Si[illegible] whaled his homer with [illegible] base in the ninth. That in[illegible] that we ought never to b[illegible] cheaply.

Dykes made some pret[illegible] at third and undoubtedly [illegible] enemy score down. Dib[illegible] again played a wonderful [illegible] short. Bishop and F[illegible] played excellently. In f[illegible] was never anything w[illegible] our defense.

SLUMP CAN'T LAST

We lost because we c[illegible] Grimes and the Card[illegible] hit Grove.

GRIMES CARDS' BEST—RUTH

By BABE RUTH

Baseball's Highest Salaried Player

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—It is always a pleasure to have a prediction come true, and in this world series, where so much has gone askew, I hope I will be pardoned for pointing with pride to some things I wrote a week ago about Burleigh Grimes. I was incorrect in picking him for the Cardinals' starting pitcher in the opening game, but my ideas about Burleigh being the best money pitcher in the St. Louis ranks look pretty good today.

Babe Ruth

It was a tough spot for the veteran. He had been shunted back behind a pair of youngsters before being sent into the series and he no doubt had painful remembrances of the 1930 series when he was defeated twice, even though he pitched fine ball each time. Here was a really important game for any pitcher. Each team had won a game and this would put one team ahead and impose a heavy burden on the other. Grimes knew the winning habits of the Mackmen at Shibe Park and he must have felt, too, that his team would be in bad way if it lost, with the next two games scheduled for the home park of the A's.

NEAR NO-HIT GAME

It was another terrific burden that was imposed on Grimes as he went along to the eighth without a hit being scored on him. Naturally he wanted to do what had never been done before in a

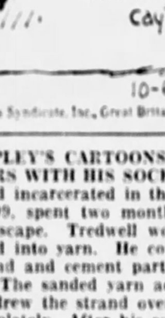
A'S DAMPENED BY SPITTERS

By NICK ALTROCK

Baseball's Funny Man

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—I guess it is only going to take Pepper Martin and almost any Cardinal pitcher to make suckers out of the A's and monkeys out of my predictions. The way the Athletics' Murderers' Row batted against Burleigh Grimes, they could not even be indicted for manslaughter. And maybe it isn't going to be tough on Uncle Nick if the series closes in St. Louis. I will have to take freight trains back to Washington.



Nick Altrock

It begins to look as if the A's were depending to win the series just on Al Simmons' homers.

Yesterday's game had ideal weather, but when Grimes started operating his spitter, the infield was covered with mist. At that, Connie Mack could just as well sent up his boys to bat with umbrellas. Unless the A's perk up in their batting, I don't see how they can hope to win the series unless the Cards sign up Hack Wilson to play centerfield.

Yesterday was the first game of the series when they used the American League ball. About the only difference I could see it makes is that the Shibe Brothers pay for the fouls that go into the grandstand instead of Sam Breadon.

ONE-EYE ON JOB

Uncle Nick is now pretty sure he will go back to St. Louis, as he still can't see the A's dropping three straight games. And if Pangborn and Herndon can fly 4,000 miles over water to land in

FIREMEN OUT OF LEAGUE

By TOM BIRKS

At a special meeting of the managers of the Western Pennsylvania Independent Football Conference last evening, it was decided by a unanimous vote to drop the East Pittsburgh Firemen from the Conference schedule.

Lack of drawing power on the part of the Quarry club was the reason for the dropping of the club.

Nothing was done towards adding a sixth member to fill the vacancy.

The teams were represented by Paul Muzzio, of West View; Art Rooney and Chris McCormick, of the J. P. Rooneys; Carney and Kabal, of the Dan Burns club; Andy Cutler, of East Liverpool, and Bull Boyer and Toner Bathust, of the McKeesport Olympics. Business Manager Garrity represented the East Pittsburgh Firemen.

The points won by Burns and West View will stand in the percentage column, and the rest of the scheduled games with East Pittsburgh will find the opposing club credited with the points.

Next Sunday only two games will be played in the Conference. The J. P. Rooneys go to West View and the Dan Burns club stacks up with the McKeesport Olympics at Olympia Park.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The current economic depression cut betting on the six race tracks in the province of Quebec by only 3 per cent during the 1931 season.

A total of $5,237,716 was wagered, a decrease over the figures of 1930 of only $190,415. Figures on other tracks in Canada have shown a decrease of from 25 to 30 per cent.

GRIMES BELIEVES INJURED FINGER BROKEN

Grimm's Double Keeps Cubs in Running for Chicago City Crown

CARDS ACE MAY BE FORCED OUT OF SERIES

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—Burleigh Grimes came out of the greatest game of his career with a pitching hand finger that may be fractured.

Grimes informed the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph correspondent he would have an X-ray picture taken of the small finger of his right hand with a view of learning the extent of the injury inflicted yesterday afternoon when he tried to stop George Haas' grounder.

Burleigh thinks the finger is broken. He is annoyed to such an extent that he has to accept the congratulations that are coming to him by using his left hand.

If the finger is broken, it may be that Grimes will be unable to start another game of the series. Jess Haines is in the hospital and Paul Derringer is suffering with a nose ailment that is akin to an abscess.

JOINS SELECT COMPANY

Grimes, in pitching the sixth two-hit game of world series history, put himself in this company:

1906, October 11, Ed Walsh, Chicago White Sox vs. Chicago Cubs, 2-0.

1906, October 12, Mordecai Brown, Cubs vs. White Sox, 1-0.

1914, October 10, Bill James, Boston Braves vs. Athletics, 1-0.

1921, October 6, Waite Hoyt, Yankees vs. Giants, 3-0.

1931, October 5, Burleigh Grimes, Cardinals vs. Athletics, 5-2.

Derringer Hears Win by Radio Near Bedside

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Paul Derringer, crack rookie hurler of the St. Louis Cardinals, heard his comrades win yesterday, but he didn't see the game.

Sinus trouble and a nose infection had him in bed at his hotel, and reports of the game came by radio.

Tony Cuccinello, Cincinnati Red second baseman, and San Freidland, of Rochester, were with Derringer during the game. Many telegrams during the afternoon brought smiles to his face.

Derringer said he first noticed pains in his head the day before he pitched the world series opener at St. Louis. An abscess in the nose was lanced and the star pitcher ordered to bed.

Derringer attended today's game. He was to visit a physician for an examination after the fray.

FINAL GAME SLATED FOR TODAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Charley Grimm, the Cubs clinging first baseman, kept the National League in the battle for the Chicago city baseball title yesterday with a ninth-inning double that gave his team a 3-to-2 victory over the White Sox, and an even break in the set. The seventh and final game will be played today.

LOCAL ELEVENS BACK TO WORK

in town Friday night to gallavant under the lights at Forbes Field. Gyp was the baby who raced some 78 yards for a touchdown against the Bukers last year and he hasn't gone back an inch since. In fact, he's still going forward.

Some of these college football players do and say some funny things during the games. This guy Reider at Pitt, a cocky little pepper-pot, talks the opposition to death, and as far as that goes, talks everyone to death all the time. Here is one he pulled at Iowa Saturday:

Reider had been working on Ed Dee, a giant Hawkeye tackle and had been socking him all over the field. Finally, Coach Ingwersen sent in a substitute. Reider put him on the defensive right off the bat. He walked up to him as he reported, and cracked:

"Say you, I hope you are tougher than that other baby they had in here, Shucks, he didn't even give me a good workout."

Howard Harpster was telling me yesterday at lunch about young Buck Nelle, who plays fullback for Geneva and backs up the Covenanter line. Harpster knew his team was in for a tough afternoon with Rochester last week and when how much depended on Nelle doing a good job.

Nelle is only a freshman, but he's a tough and rugged youngster who knows his football. He loves it, loves to smack you and smack you hard. Harpster took him aside just before the team took the field and said:

"Buck, everything depends on you in there today. Everything. Let's see you go out there and bust 'em wide open."

The result was that Nelle went into the game thinking that he and he alone stood between Geneva and defeat. His defense play was as fine as any that has ever been seen at Geneva. Harpster said he did as good a job at nailing Brown ball toters as any defensive player he'd ever had the pleasure of watching.

A movement to have the Pitt and Tech freshmen eleven clash in a preliminary tussle to the Pitt-Western Reserve varsity encounter at Pitt Stadium Saturday, October 17, were dropped today. The yearling teams will meet in the Tartan Bowl the morning of that date.

Wagner to Attend Trinity Fete Tonight

About 80 boys, ranging from youngsters 10 years of age to young men of college timber, who are associated with the numerous basketball teams at Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, will be dined in Trinity House at 6 o'clock this evening as the opening gesture to the floor sport for the season to come. T. Aubrey Davies, director of athletics, will be in charge; the main speaker will be Jean Moor, and the honored guest, Honus Wagner.

world series. He had to put everything he had on every ball he pitched. He finally was hit, but a two-hit game must be classed with the great pitching efforts of world series play.

I didn't think he could do it, or that any other pitcher could do it. So my cap is off to Burleigh.

The A's are not performing up to their American League standard in this series, either in pitching or hitting. They look stale to me and I say that without any idea of belittling the work of the Cardinals. The National Leaguers have deserved every bit of success to date and surely are playing better ball than any other National League team has played in a series in many years.

MUST SNAP OUT OF IT

Granting Hallahan and Grimes all the pitching skill that they possess, and both are high class pitchers, no pitcher in the game figures to hold the A's helpless as they have been held recently. Two shutouts, a two-run, and a one-run game have been pitched against them in their last five starts, and in their 6-2 victory they were blanked in seven of the nine innings.

They will have to snap out of that hitting slump quickly or they are cooked as far as this series goes. Perhaps the Cardinal pitchers will continue to pitch such good ball that the A's can't snap out of it.

I look to see the A's break out with some real hitting today. They have been blanked in 24 of their 27 innings since the series began. They are due to make the afternoon unpleasant for some pitcher.

PEPPER SALTY DOSE FOR A'S

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Nicest thing about this world series is that it doesn't interfere with your work.

In between the second and third game George Phair hopped out to cover a football game. Something that baseball fans really are interested in.

Damon Runyon took advantage of the two-day layoff to bounce up to Chicago for the Capone trial.

Pangborn and Herndon flew the Pacific. New York captured the baby-killers and Tom Edison rallied.

We're just telling this to the Philadelphia fans because they were under the impression that everything in the world had happened to the Athletics.

Just one thing happened to them. It's name was Martin.

They call him Pepper because he's so salty.

You cannot blame Connie Mack. He looked over the St. Louis roster and saw nobody he was scared of.

He hadn't figured on Martin. The guy was a stowaway.

When things got going he popped up and there he was.

As Connie said about Martin after today's game:

"How was I to know about this turnip when his own folks think he is a plumber's apprentice? There's too many gadgets in this series.

"Anyway, a guy can't keep track of everything new. I fan myself with a scorecard. Next year, I guess, I'll have to fan myself with a Sears-Roebuck catalog in order to keep up with the times."

All Mr. Martin did yesterday was to bazoo a single and a double, start a couple of batting rallies and slide home like a microbe under a microscope.

The play was so close that the four umpires unlimbered their whiskbrooms and were still dusting the plate at midnight.

Philly fans got a little fun when Simmons made the grand slam in the ninth. But it was too late. The hoss had been sold along with the Sinclair stable.

we ever behind, and it is a novelty for us to be topped by one game at the present time.

I don't think for a minute that we are out of it, because we lost with Grove yesterday. There is plenty of fight left and we are out to win the next two here and then go to St. Louis and end the series. We haven't hit a lick in our last two games, and our men are certain to get out of this slump.

If the Athletics show their normal batting power this afternoon, I don't think there will be any doubt about the result, but you can well understand that we are not underestimating the strength of the Cardinals. We will be ourselves before this series ends.

HELPING HAND GOLF OPENS

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Two golf tourneys are in progress today. The qualifying round for the Helping Hand tourney, in which entrants must donate a piece of clothing or the like to compete, was under way at the South Park county links, while a player-caddie contest was being staged at the North Park course.

The scheduled pro-amateur tourney, slated for the Shannopin Country Club Thursday, has been rescheduled for Thursday, October 15, according to Charley Manning, professional.

Ted Luther came through yesterday in the first annual Schenley open championship, the Corry, Pa., Country Club professional aggregating a 36-hole total of 131, by virtue of rounds of 65 and 66, to walk off with the $150 top prize, at the municipal links yesterday. Par at Schenley is 66. Luther is a former West Penn open champion.

Another "upstater," Fred Baroni, of Oakland Beach, Conneaut Lake, was second with 64-49—133, and Pete O'Hara, of Westmoreland, reigning West Penn titlist, and Andy Velican, Greene County Country Club, Waynesburg, pro, tied at 134 for next honors.

Charley Onoretta, of Schenley, and Walter Johnstone, of Butler, were deadlocked at 135.

Fred Weppner, Stanton Heights amateur, who formerly starred at Schenley, led the amateurs in the field with a 136 total, which was only a stroke better than E. Vincent Eldred, Highland member of the paid brigade.

J. A. McGoogan, of Youngstown, had the lucky number in the kickers' handicap of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Club Managers' Association of America tournament yesterday at the Wildwood Country Club. It was a net 85.

J. T. Lambert, of Uniontown, was second with a net 79, while Tom Carey, of the Union Club, and Joe Truhan, of Alcoma, tied at 77. John Camozzi, of the Field Club, and W. A. Tavana, of South Hills, tied for low gross with 87s.

Club members from Ohio and other Western Pennsylvania cities were guests of the local chapter at the tourney and dinner dance which followed it. The scores of the leaders:

W. Tavana, 87-15—72; John Camozzi, 87-16—71; Ralph Stivers, 112-39—73; John Ast, 118-45—73; J. Hannelly, 97, 105-30—75; O. S. Lehner, 101-25—76; H. Miller, 99-22—77; J. D. Truhan, 97-20—77; Tom Carey, 102-25—77; J. C. Windish, 112-35—78; Ray Gloekler, 108-30—78; J. T. Lambert, 119-40—79; T. Kinsella, 105-25—80; Otto Eberle, 95-15—80; R. R. Randolph, 97-15—82; F. M. Roessing, 103-18—85; Jesse C. Stewart, 107-23—84; J. A. McGoogan, 105-20—85; E. Schoettle, 114-24—90; William Jones, 126-30—96.

Speaking of the fights at Motor Square Garden last night, that certainly was a pip of a ball game Burleigh Grimes pitched in Philadelphia yesterday. Yes sir, a pip of a game.

Well, anyway, they put old bald-headed Leo Paluso, of Salt Lake City, a washed-up veteran in there against Frankie Bojarski, the tough Polish southpaw lightweight, of Erie, in the scheduled 10-round main bout, and the crowd began to walk out after a round or two of it, and when Frankie really began to get serious and dropped the bloody Paluso for a count of nine in the fifth round there was a general movement for the doors.

A few moments later Paluso was down again, and this time he heeded sage advice from the ringside to stay there for the count, although he was on one knee and holding onto the ropes and could have got up to carry on his hopeless and hapless cause.

PRELIMINARIES ARE BAD

Speaking of that Grimes game, the preliminaries were the poorest in many moons around here and in perfect accord with the terrible windup. Henry Attel, of Girard, O., and Carl Montebano, of Braddock, a couple of gambling middleweights, played football with each other for eight rounds in the semi-final with Montebano finally belting his man into submission toward the finish to win the decision. This was the only bout to go the limit, and it could have been stopped to save Attel, who was helpless in the final round. Attel subbed on short notice for Jimmy Moore, who was said to be injured.

Pritzie Zivic, making his professional debut, plucked a soft one in Al Reddinger, of the North Side, in the second bout, and Referee Red Robinson stopped it after only 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the opening round, with Pritzie making a punching bag of his foe. The former amateur star, brother of Jack and Pete Zivic, showed a lot of speed and fighting skill, but was not sufficiently extended to give the fans a real line on his ability.

CHANEY IS WINNER

Young Chaney, a newcomer from Philadelphia, was too rugged for Johnny Warner, of Clairton, whom he outpunched all of the way in the opener until Referee Joe Keally finally called a halt at the end of the fourth round, when Dr. M. R. Goldman, the commission physician, advised stopping the bout because of a bad cut over Warner's left eye.

The house was the poorest in a long time at the Garden, and deservedly so, judging from the caliber of bouts offered and the fans were doing a lot of complaining throughout. Mose Butch was introduced with the announcement that he will meet Johnny Datto in the main bout next Monday night.

Between Rounds

Colleges in the Western Pennsylvania sector planning to have boxing teams will meet with Commissioner Dr. W. A. Clelland in his office in the Keppel Building at 4 p. m. Thursday. A general meeting for colleges in the eastern part of the state will be held in Philadelphia today.

Jack Tracey, Negro middleweight, of the North Side, is back home from Alabama, where he went recently to attend his father's funeral, and is ready to box again.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, has completed his card for his second show of the season, Thursday night, with the signing of Young Lewistette, of McKeesport, to box Peter Johns, of Pittsburgh, in the opening bout. Jimmy Thomas, of the Hill, meets Pinky Silverberg, of New York, in the 10-round windup. Marty McHale, formerly of McKeesport, now of Cleveland, is in the eight-round semi-final with Steve Welch, of McKeesport, and Jimmy Boots, McKeesport Negro, boxes Patsy Bennigan, of Clairton, in the second number.

Charley Crevatta, of Uniontown, is a member of a team of amateur stars which sails from New York today for a tour of Germany, Finland, Denmark and Ireland.

a town like Wenatchee, Wash., I don't know what kick I've got coming for traveling a thousand miles to St. Louis for some good beer.

They are blaming the loss to Lefty Grove's blister. Out of all the cures for corns, bunions, warts, blackheads and pimples it was Connie Mack's tough luck not to have any lotion for a blister. Mickey Cochrane is also supposed to be suffering from a charley horse. But from the way he caught yesterday it can't be anything more serious than a colt.

President Hoover was at the game. He entered the grounds without any outward incidents except One-eye Connolly tried to crash the gate right behind him. One-eye claimed he was in Hoover's cabinet as secretary of commerce. The gatekeeper told One-eye it didn't take a secretary to handle all the U. S. Commerce since 1929 and an office boy could do it instead. Connolly argued so much they finally made him secretary of the exterior. Throwing him out through gate No. 8.

Well, folks, game No. 4 is on the docket next. Connie Mack won't announced his pitching selection till game time. But he will spend this morning in prayer.

SYRACUSE CUP BIDDERS FALL

By JULIUS LEVIN

Two powerful contenders for the Syracuse Cup, emblematic of the football championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, Inc., fell by the wayside during the past week in the defeats suffered by New Castle and Turtle Creek Union.

While New Castle's defeat at the hands of the smooth-working Charleroi machine was expected by close followers of scholastic football, the sound drubbing Foxy Miller's Turtle Creek eleven suffered at the hands of Ford City proved one of the biggest surprises of the season.

Four of the leading contenders face important tasks this weekend when they engage strong opponents. Three of the headline attractions are scheduled for nocturnal affairs on Friday, while Clairton will strive for its third successive victory at the expense of Scott in Clairton on Saturday. Friday night's contests find Ambridge at Monessen, Washington at New Castle, and Fayette City at Charleroi. The records of the district teams to date follow:

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Rush Up — Local Stocks Recover

STOCK PRICES RUSH UP 2 TO 16 POINTS

List Slips Momentarily, But Advance Is Quickly Resumed; Rails in Lead

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The stock market came out of the dumps with a rush today, as feverish buying and short covering was inspired by news of further aggressive efforts to deal with the powers of depression.

Both the London and Paris markets improved substantially in sympathy with New York although President Hoover explained that conferences of bankers and political leaders in Washington were primarily for the purpost of dealing with the domestic situation. The bond market also brightened.

Prominent stocks rushed up about 2 to 16 points. They slipped back a little from the best momentarily as trading quieted down somewhat after midday, but the advance was quickly resumed. Price averages at 1 p. m. indicated an average rise of more than 5 points. Santa Fe Railroad shot up 16 points, on news of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50. Union Pacific rushed up more than 10. Miscellaneous issues rising about 5 to 8 included United States Steel, American Telephone, American Can, North American, Westinghouse, Woolworth, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco "B," Southern Pacific, New York Central, Eastman, and others. General Electric gained 2, and General Motors nearly as much.

After its long ordeal of bad news and nervous selling, the market displayed tremendous relief at the news that aggressive and constructive measures were under consideration, although rumors as to the nature of measures considered were of the vaguest nature.

While there had been some rumors in Wall street that Washington was considering an extension of the international debt moratorium, well-informed bankers expressed doubt that any such program would be initiated on this side of the Atlantic at this time.

Decisive action to prevent short selling that would depress the market was also viewed in many quarters as highly constructive.

The money market was slightly firmer today. There was no call money offered in the outside market under the official rate of 1½ per cent.

COTTON PRICES ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 2 points. There was little evidence of southern selling and after initial offerings prices rose a few points on trade buying and covering. December advanced to 5.69, or 8 points higher.

The market stiffened right after the call and worked 23 to 25 points higher. A better tone in the stock market and the possibility of constructive developments in Washington also were influences.

At the close of the first hour the market had eased slightly and quotations were 6 or 7 points off from the top.

Offerings were absorbed by continued trade buying or covering, however, and the market steadied up again toward midday with December advancing to 5.77 cents and March to 6.06 cents and with the general list showing net gains of 24 to 28 points.

According to a canvass made here this morning 87 members of the New York Cotton Exchange, on the average, are expecting a crop of 15,960,000 bales. A private report issued this morning placed the condition of the crop at 68.1 and the indicated yield at 16,004,000 bales.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Raw sugar was steady and unchanged early today at 3.0[illegible] for spots. No sales were reported this morning, but yesterday's business was said to have totaled fully 100,000 bags of Cuban to local and outport refiners, all for prompt shipment.

In refined, one refiner announced an advance of 10 points to 4.60c a pound, effective at the close tomorrow, others held at 4.50c for fine granulated, with a fair inquiry reported, but still limited to nearby requirements only.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The curb joined other security markets in a rally today. Expected developments in Washington and the imposition of further surveillance over short selling attracted active buying and prices firmed throughout the list.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

SAME DIVIDEND ON ATCHISON

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 on the common stock, payable December 1 to stock of record October 30.

Wall street had awaited news of the dividend with keen interest, some observers regarding it as one of the most important dividend actions of the quarter. Because of the extraordinary record of this carrier, it was pointed out that its dividend action might be interpreted as an indication of the business outlook, as seen by the leaders in business and finance on its board of directors.

The road's directors include Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation; William C. Potter, president of the Guaranty Trust Company; Charles Steele, partner in J. P. Morgan & Co.; Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America; Clarence M. Woolly, chairman of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation; Edward J. Berwind, chairman of the Berwind White Coal Company.

Wall street was inclined in some quarters to look for a reduction of the dividend, in view of the slump in railroad earnings, and Atchison stock had recently declined to the lowest price for several years. As of December 31, 1930, however, the company had a balance in cash and government securities of more than $50,000,000.

The market closed unchanged to ¼ penny off.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Westinghouse Bookings Show Gain; Dividend Earned in Quarter.

New business booked by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in September showed a fair gain over that in August, particularly in the apparatus and refrigeration divisions, although volume was below that in September, 1930. The company closed the third quarter ended September 30, last, with a sizeable profit. It is significant that net income in three months of June to August, inclusive, this year, were sufficient to cover by a small margin the dividend of 62½ cents a share declared recently on both the preferred and common stocks. Net income for those three months exceeded $1,650,000 after all charges.

Despite the less favorable operating results this year, Westinghouse has materially improved the status of its liquid finances. As of August 31, last, current assets were equal to better than $11 for each $1 of current liabilities, with cash holdings approximating $23,000,000. Current ratio as of December 31, 1930, was $7.69 to $1, with cash and time loans of $22,254,340.

The American Smelting and Refining Company today reduced the annual dividend basis to $1.50 from $2. American Smelting common stock has been a steady dividend payer for about 27 years, except when interrupted for about two years owing to the 1921 depression. Following the omission due to post-war reverses, payments were resumed on a $5 basis in the second half of 1923, the annual rate being subsequently increased by stages to $8, effective through the years 1927-1928. After the three-for-one split up, the new common was placed on a $4 annual basis from February 1, 1929, but owing to reduced earnings the annual rate was cut to $2 by declaration of 50 cents quarterly, payable August 1, last.

Much of the selling in stocks recently has been attributed to liquidation of collateral behind security loans made to individuals by banks. This week's condition statement of member banks reporting to the Reserve, however, hardly supports that theory in full. It must be remembered, however, that the current figures cover the period up to Wednesday of last week and therefore do not embrace the last four or five days of heavy sales. Loans on securities show a net drop of $15,000,000 for the period, the result of an increase of $34,000,000 in collateral loans of banks in the New York district, offset by a net decrease of $49,000,000 in security loans of banks outside New York. The sharp rise in net demand deposits and expansion in the amount due to banks accepted as reflecting month-end shifting to meet dividend and interest payments which were due at that time.

That the banks were active on the buying side of the bond market during the interval is evident from the sharp increases shown in holdings of both government and miscellaneous investments.

Reporting member banks increased their holdings of governments by $26,000,000 in the week to $4,223,000,000, the current total showing and increase of $1,277,000,000 over the corresponding date last year. Holdings of miscellaneous investments, namely bonds, other than governments, expanded by $46,000,000 to $3,693,000,000, a figure $18,000,000 larger than at this time last year.

Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, upon his return from abroad stated that the company's earnings in the first eight months of the year more than covered the full year's dividend requirements of $2.60 a share. August proved a better month than anticipated, and warm weather in September brought business ahead of the corresponding month last year. The cash position is strong, with more than $24,000,000 on hand and no bank loans. The current position is considerably stronger than on January 1, last. The company has already retired more than $1,000,000 of its bonds for February 1, 1932, sinking fund requirements.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Vincent Bendix, president of Bendix Aviation Corporation, in a letter to stockholders said the company's earnings for the first nine months this year will be better than 80 cents a share "and our forecasts for the final quarter show that the company will earn a substantial profit."

OIL PRODUCTION OFF IN WEEK

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Small decreases in several areas caused a drop of 22,341 barrels daily in the crude oil production of the United States in the week ending October 3, making the total daily 2,135,492 barrels as compared with 2,157,923 barrels in the preceding period, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

Oklahoma production increased 9,300 barrels daily to a total of 273,135 barrels daily, largely due to an increase in the Oklahoma City field.

East Texas production was down, totaling 381,396 barrels daily as compared with 397,312 barrels.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Auburn Automobile net for quarter ended August 31 was equal after all charges to about $2.70 or $3.60 a share on 199,139 shares outstanding. In the third quarter of 1930 the company earned $7 cents a share. For nine months Auburn earned about $15 a share against $5.60 in 1930.

Union Oil of California for nine months ended September 30 reports net profit of $3,500,000 against net of $8,000,000 in same period in 1930. September quarter net was $1,300,000 against $2,850,000 in 1930.

Davison Chemical Company and subsidiaries report for year ended June 30 net loss of $237,604 after all charges and net profit in the previous year of $2,026,486.

Interborough Rapid Transit Company reports for year ended June 30 deficit of $3,315,934 after taxes, rentals, fixed charges and 5 per cent Manhattan preferred dividend rental, compared with deficit of $2,135,076 in previous fiscal year.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The stock market closed cheerful with further gains in gilt-edge securities and industrials and a slight recovery in trans-Atlantic issues. Improve sterling exchange and favorable Wall street advices aided the advance. Sterling touched $3.90 and Paris 96 francs 78 centimes.

Useless Gloom Overhangs Convention of Bankers

By B. C. FORBES

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6. THE WEATHER here is delightfully sunny, bathers are disporting in the warm surf. Children are romping on the glistening sand, holiday makers are lolling in wheel chairs or parading leisurely along the boardwalk. It looks a very pleasant world—outside.

B. C. Forbes

But inside, in the meeting place of the American Bankers Association convention, there is less sunshine, less of the holiday making sprit. The bankers—with exceptions—are a glum lot—too glum, much too glum, childishly glum.

THERE ARE STILL 20 open, solvent banks for every one closed, insolvent, this year. There are still 95 per cent of our total banks deposits available, untouched, safe, secure.

Timid souls, including some bankers, are gazing apprehensively at the hole, not at the doughnut. If it be not accounted sacrilegious to crack a joke in these ultra-gloomy days, one might remark that there's still a great deal of dough in this country, only there are too many nuts.

Which reminds me of one James Speyer, international banker, brings back from Germany. The barbers there have reduced rates—or, rather, they are charging only the old rates notwithstanding that faces are now longer.

ALMOST EVERY banker I've talked with today—President Stephenson, incoming President Harry Haas; Frank Sisson, New York; Rudolf Hecht, New Orleans; Lewis Pierson, New York; John G. Lonsdale, St. Louis; Craig Hazlewood, Chicago; Tom Preston, Chattanooga; John McHugh, New York; John Puelicher, Milwaukee—almost all desire that it be explained very clearly to the public that banks are helped or hurt, strengthened or weakened, by the action of depositors and that it is in the interest of every last one of us, whether business man or bank officer, employer or employe, investor or non-investor, to do nothing to injure the most important pillar in our whole financial industrial business structure, our banks.

Once when I asked the veteran John D. Rockefeller to what he himself chiefly attributed his success he immediately replied:

"To others."

"No man liveth to himself."

Let shortsighted selfishness run riot, let each person disregard the general interest, let all attempt to practise the motto "each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost"—let such conduct spread and it would prove self destruction, suicide. We must have sense enough, gumption enough, sanity enough to all hang together—or all be hanged together.

THAT SHOULD BE clearly understood by every individual tempted to be carried away by current hysteria and to withdraw funds from banks to be hoarded.

It isn't our monetary condition that needs correction; it is our mental condition.

THE NEWS HERE is that President Hoover summoned a number of influential bankers to Washington and that he indulged in plain speaking yesterday. The understanding here is that he let them know very plainly that the time has come to abandon the let-things-take-their-course attitude, that concerted, constructive action should be forthwith organized, that short selling of stocks must be prohibited by the New York Stock Exchange, and that, in short, confident, courageous leadership be asserted.

If all that is true, hurrah for Hoover!

Our men of might and money led us up the dizzy heights. Why not demand they exert themselves to the utmost to lead us out of these absurd depths?

HERE'S A LITTLE secret that will gladden all except bears. It comes from a banker of unimpeachable reputation.

The wealthy head of a company learned a bear raid on his stock was planned. He arranged to absorb every share offered. And he did. Then he informed the Stock Exchange authorities of just what happened and how the specialist had connived at the raid.

He added that the shorts had sold themselves into a trap and couldn't find certificates to deliver.

Unfortunately, instead of making them pay ruinous prices to cover, he foolishly let them settle at losses ranging from 25 to 30 per cent.

THE CONVENTION gets into action in earnest today. But controversial subjects are, wisely, to be sidetracked.

P. S.—God doesn't make them better than Dwight Morrow.

Steel Company Profits to Show Further Decline

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE STEEL INDUSTRY has come to the close of the third quarter with operations at the lowest rate since pre war days. Production has been practically stable at 30 per cent of capacity for the past three months. The fourth quarter is being started with no prospects for any improvement in volume before 1932.

Within a few weeks earnings statements will be published for the third quarter. Operations have averaged at a lower rate than in the second quarter. Prices have been as low or lower. The only possibility of showing improvement in earnings lies in operating economies and salary reductions.

Fourth quarter earnings will show the benefits of the 10 per cent reduction in wages placed into effect by practically all steel companies. These savings are unlikely to result in any very marked improvement in results when the unfavorable developments in the industry are balanced against them. In all probability third and fourth quarter earnings statements will show profits slightly lower than in the second quarter.

Few Companies to Cover Dividends

ONLY TWO STEEL COMPANIES reported earnings sufficient to cover their common dividend requirements for the second quarter. These were National Steel and Inland Steel. It is doubtful if even these organizations will be able to duplicate this performance in the third and fourth quarters. National probably will show its dividend for the full year earned in spite of the drop in the later half of 1931 since a substantial margin over dividend needs was piled up in the first half of the year.

With the single exception of this company, the dominant producers in this industry, one of the greatest in the country, will not show common dividends earned for the year. Only a few will report preferred dividends covered and many will actually report losses.

Efficiency Increased

THE RECORD OF THE STEEL TRADE for the present year has been a sad one, but there have been some favorable developments. The economies placed into effect have materially reduced overhead costs. Inefficient employes have been eliminated, office forces have been cut to the bone. Wage cuts have been placed into effect. Many companies have made large expenditures for improved operating equipment in spite of the low volume of business.

Many of these economies, particularly wage and salary reductions, may not have been wise from the standpoint of the general welfare of the country. But the steel companies have cleaned house and they will be able to make money on lower prices and at lower operating rates in the future than in the past.

The steel companies, as a result of their intensive economy programs, will reflect any improvement in business next year in advancing earnings to a marked extent.

The steel industry passed through September without recording any improvement in business. The next critical period will come in the early months of 1932. If a gain of larger than seasonal proportions takes place at that time, higher prices and further recovery may be expected to follow in later months.

EXCHANGE BANS BEAR RAIDING

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The New York Stock Exchange took further measures designed drastically to curtail short selling today.

The committee on business conduct informed members that their floor brokers must be notified with each selling order whether it is a real or "long" sale, or whether it is a short sale.

While official comment from the exchange is lacking, it is understood that no short sales are being permitted that will depress the price of the stock.

While the stock exchange has traditionally been committed to maintaining a free and open market, and vigorously opposed any restrictions on legitimate trading, there has at last arisen a strong feeling among stock exchange members themselves that some action should be taken to reassure the public that no destructive trading tactics are being permitted.

Brokers opposed to banning short selling in unsettled times have branded it as a sort of price fixing, likely to set a bad precedent. They hold that such a precedent will result in agitation for checking of short selling whenever the market has a severe break, although the break may merely correct a dangerously inflated price structure.

Proponents of the ban on short selling, however, assert that persistent declines in security values in these times tend to impair the liquidity of financial institutions, and regardless of theories about free and open markets, bearish activity must be checked.

Receiver Asked for Large Bus Firm

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—A petition for receivership has been filed by Mack-International Motor Truck Company in Federal Court against the Interstate Transit, Inc., operating company of Colonial Stages, second largest motor transportation line in the country.

The petition states that Mack-International holds a mortgage on the buses operated by Interstate of $914,170, with interest of $48,000 from December 1, 1930. In addition, Mack alleges it is owed $32,190 for parts.

Rand Is Refused Cotton Belt Job

Rand for authority to hold the position of director of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad while continuing to hold a similar position with the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad.

Corporate Financing Up for September

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Corporate stock and bond financing in September totaled $129,200,000, against $70,900,000 in August and $184,700,000 in July, a compilation by Standard Statistics Company shows. Financing for the first nine months this year was less than half that of the similar period of 1930 and less than one-third that of the 1929 period.

Ernst's Improper Expression Shocks His Mother

CHAPTER XXIII.

A few days like that alone in a house eat into a man come straight from the trenches.

Adolf tried to catch the fellow, but he always saw Adolf in time and made himself scarce. Adolf lay in wait and hunted for him everywhere—but he could not get him; and that quite destroyed him.

Then her people came and talked. He should consider it, they said; his wife had been straight again for a long time now; and then, to be alone for four years—that is no small thing, the man was to blame, and after all, people did a lot of strange things during the war.

"What's a fellow to do, Ernst?" Adolf looks up.

"I don't know," I say.

"Worth coming back home for, Ernst, eh?"

I refill the glasses and we drink. Adolf has no cigars in the house and does not want to go himself to the store, so I offer to fetch some. He is a heavy smoker; it might help matters if he had a few cigars. So I take a whole box full of "Woodman's Joy"—fat, brown stumps that have not been misnamed, for they are pure beech leaf. Still they are better than nothing.

RETURNS DAILY

When I re-enter the house someone else is also there, and I see at once that it is his wife. She carries herself upright, though her shoulders are frail—there is something pathetic about a woman's neck and shoulders; they are childlike in some way. One can never really bring oneself to be harsh with them.

"Good day," I say and take off my cap. She does not reply. I put the cigars in front of Adolf, but he does not touch them. The clock is ticking. Leaves of the chestnut tree fall spinning down past the window. Sometimes one will strike on the pane and the wind holds it there. The five earth-brown leaves, all joined on one stem, look like outspread clutching hands threatening from outside those in the room—brown, dead hands of autumn.

Adolf moves at last and in a voice I do not know, says: "Go now, Marie."

She rises obediently, like a school child, and looking straight before her she goes. The slim neck, the frail shoulders—how can it be possible?

"Every day she comes like that and sits there and says nothing, and waits and looks at me," says Adolf morosely. I am sorry for him, but I feel sorry now for the woman, too.

"Come back to town with me, Adolf. There's no point in your squatting here," I suggest.

But he will not. Outside the dog starts to bark. His wife is going out at the garden gate now, back to her parents.

"Does she want to come back again, then?" I ask. He nods. I say no more. He must settle that for himself. "Won't you come with me?" I try once again.

"Later, Ernst."

"Well, have a cigar, anyway." I shove the box toward him and wait until he takes one. Then I shake hands with him. "I'll come and see you again, Adolf."

He comes with me as far as the gate. I turn again after a little while and wave to him. He is still standing in the little doorway, and behind him is the darkness of evening again just as when he first climbed out and left us. He ought to have stayed with us. Now he is alone and unhappy, and we are unable to help him, glad though we would be if we could—Yes, things were much simpler at the Front; there, so long as a man was still alive, all was well.

I lie outstretched on the sofa, my head against the arm, and my eyes closed. My thoughts move through my drowse in fantastic confusion. Consciousness hovers between waking and dream and weariness like a shadow rides through my brain. Beyond, indistinctly, distant gunfire floats in, shells pipe over softly, and the tinny ringing of gongs sounds nearer, announcing a gas attack. But before I can grope for my gas mask the darkness recedes without sound, the earth, against which my face is pressed, dissolves before a feeling of warmth, more bright; it turns again into the plush sofa cover on which my cheek rests. Dimly, deep down, I am aware it is home. The gas alarm of the trenches resolves into the subdued clatter of dishes which my mother is setting out cautiously on the table.

Then the darkness glides up swiftly again, and with it a rumble of artillery. And only out of the far distance, as if they came up over forests and seas, I hear words dropping down, words that gradually sort themselves to a meaning and then penetrate into me. "Uncle Karl sent the sausage," says the voice of my mother amid the faint roll of the guns.

The words reach me on the very edge of the shell hole into which I am sliding, and with them there appears a smug, self-satisfied face, and disappears. "Ach, him"—I say sourly, and my voice sounds as though I had a mouth full of wadding, weariness is swirling around and about me so; "that silly—" Then I fall, fall, fall, and the shadows leap toward me, sweep over me in long rollers, dark and darker.

But I do not fall asleep. Something has gone that was there before—that steady, light, metallic clinking. Slowly I grope my way back into consciousness and open my eyes. There is my mother, pale and horrified, staring down at me.

"What's the matter, mother?" I cry, jumping up in alarm. "Are you ill?"

MOTHER SURPRISED

She shakes her head. "No, no but to think you would say such a thing—"

I reflect. What did I say then? Ah, yes, that about Uncle Carl. "Come mother, you mustn't be so touchy," I laugh in relief. "After all, Uncle Karl is a profiteer, you know, isn't he, now?"

"That is not what I mind at all," she answers quietly, "but that you should use such expressions."

I smooth down my hair and button my tunic. I start to hunt for a cigaret and observe incidentally that my mother is still looking at me. Her hands are trembling.

I give up my search. "But, mother!" I say in astonishment, putting my arm about her shoulders, "there's really nothing so very bad in that; Soldiers are always like that."

"Yes, yes, I know," she protests; "but you—you, too—"

There she stands before me, an old woman with an anxious, care-worn face. Her hands are clasped—weary, toil-worn hands with a soft, wrinkled skin, where the veins stand out bluish; hands become so for my sake—I never thought of that before. There is a lot I did not think of before; I was too young. But now I understand how it is that to this withered, little woman I am something different from any other soldier in the world; I am her child.

To her I have always remained so, even as a soldier. In the war she has seen only a pack of wild beasts threatening the life of her child. It has never occurred to her that this same threatened child has been just such another wild beast to the children of yet other mothers.

UNPLEASANT MEMORIES

My gaze drops from her hands to my own. In May, '17, I stabbed a Frenchman with these hands. The blood ran nauseatingly hot over my fingers and in a panic of fear and of rage I stabbed again and again. And when the Frenchman, choking, clapped his hands to the wound, I could not stop myself, but stabbed through his hands, too, till he sagged down like an emptying tube. And afterwards I vomited and the whole night through I wept. Only next day was Adolf Bethke able to comfort me; I had just turned 18 then, and that was the first attack I was in.

I turn my hands over slowly. In the big push at the beginning of July, I shot three men with these hands. They remained the whole day long hanging on the barbed wire. Their limp arms would fling upward with the blast of the shell explosions as if they still threatened us, and sometimes, too, as if imploring us for help. One of them had snow-white hair. And again, later, I once threw a bomb at 20 yards that tore the legs off an English captain. He screamed terribly. He threw back his head, his mouth wide open, and, propping himself on his rigid arms, his trunk reared like a seal; then rapidly he bled to death.

Now I sit here before my mother, and she is on the verge of tears because she cannot understand that I should have become so coarse as to make use of an improper expression.

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a school boy, tells the story of a group of war comrades who march home when peace is made, to find everything changed—themselves most of all. Adjustments in this new and strange post-war world seems impossible. The war has made them misfits, derelicts. Even their interrupted studies, which they take up again, seem futile and impractical. Ernst, conscious that his war comrades still hold his chief interest, goes to visit Adolf Bethke at his home in the country, some distance away. He finds Bethke in the depths of depression, and learns his story. Adolf had discovered on his return that his wife had been unfaithful and drove her out. But that, he finds, accentuates rather than diminishes his distress of mind.

DAILY SHORT STORY — Antiques—And So Forth

Antique Expert Advises Man About Furniture

"I do believe," Mrs. Marble whispered, "that he's going to come here!"

June Danforth looked up from her reading.

A man was getting out of a car.

"Bet he wants to sell you a washing machine or lightning rods," June said to her aunt.

"S-s-sh, he'll hear you."

The man opened the white gate, closed it carefully behind him and started up the neat brick walk with its rows of gay poppies along either side.

When he reached the porch he removed his hat. June noticed that his hair was thick and wavy and that there were cute little "crinkles" at his eyes as he smiled.

"I am looking," he said, "for antiques."

"You needn't look at me, young man," June's aunt said; "I haven't stepped over into the antique class quite yet."

"Uh—er—really—"

The young man reddened beneath his tan and was plainly very much embarrassed.

Mrs. Marble laughed.

"You didn't see any sign out, advertising antiques for sale, did you, young man?" she asked.

"No, madam. I am afraid I put it rather awkwardly."

"Now and then, as you drive through New England, you come to a house that doesn't advertise antiques for sale. This is one of them."

EXPLAINS BUSINESS

"I know—and at such places a large part of the articles for sale are copies or fakes. You see, I don't know much about antiques."

"For the land sakes, young man. Do come up and sit down. You're a curiosity. I never expected to live long enough to meet a dealer in antiques who admitted that he didn't know a thing about them."

The young man came up then and proffered his card. The name was Howard Darnton. There was no address and no clue as to his business, just his name.

"June," Mrs. Marble said, "this is Mr. Darnton—my niece, Miss Danforth."

The young man bowed and took the proffered chair.

"I—er—am not a dealer in antiques. My sister has bought a summer home over at Bayside—or her husband has bought it for her. She is just married. I couldn't get back from South America in time for the wedding and it struck me that the best wedding present I could make her would be to furnish one of the rooms strictly colonial."

"Yes? And you thought this place looked colonial?"

AUTHOR OF BOOK

"The place looks pleasant, solid, like an old but well maintained home. You see I thought I would have better luck if I consulted someone who did not sell antiques. I thought such a person, especially one living in a home as nice as this, would be willing to tell me where I might find genuine antiques."

Mr. Darnton turned to June then and noticed that she was holding a large volume entitled "Lares and Penates of Colonial Days."

"I say Miss—er—Danforth—a book like that ought to be just the thing for me. I didn't know there was anything like that—may I look, please?"

June handed him the volume. He wondered why Mrs. Marble gigled like a school girl, and then he discovered the reason. The author of the book, according to the bright jacket, was June Danforth!

"Why, really now—some kind influence caused me to stop here! Imagine meeting an actual authority on Colonial stuff!"

Mr. Howard Darnton popped out a memo book and jotted down the name of the publisher.

"I shall send for one—and more than that, Miss Danforth, I shall venture to ask if I could get your services? Oh, I mean, in a strictly professional manner. I realize that this antique stuff business is a profession with you and so I would gladly pay you for your advice."

"Yes, doubtless I could help you," June agreed, "only I would first have to know something of the nature of this room you want to furnish for your sister."

"Workmen are restoring the old place sister bought. It is rather late now, but if I called tomorrow would you be able to drive over to Bayside and look at the place?"

June looked at her aunt inquiringly.

"That would be all right, June—we will drive over with Mr. Darnton tomorrow," she said.

Mr. Howard Darnton was well pleased. He drove away, agreeing to return the next day at noon.

EXCELLENT MOVE

"You might as well," Mrs. Marble said to June after he had gone, "help the poor chap out—and charge him plenty—charge the way lawyers and doctors do for what you know. He seems to be well able to pay."

"I wouldn't know what to charge him, aunty. I'm not so very much impressed, he seems to be terribly dumb."

"I guess not, except about colonial antiques. He seems quite nice and bright. And he must be honest, to confess his ignorance. We'll go over and look at this house and you can advise him."

"Well," June agreed, "I could tell him just what he needed for this room after I saw it, and I could tell him where he could pick up most of the necessary articles. It will be fun."

Mrs. Marble told her husband about it when he got back that day.

"June was getting desperate," she said, "and I was beginning to get all jittery myself, over her. This will be a godsend and will take her mind off that man."

"Well," Sam Marble answered, I hope so. I'll be doggone if I ever try to help anyone cure a love-sick girl."

"Oh, she's mostly forgot him, I guess. And anyway, your sister was just right—if she didn't approve of the man June seemed to get infatuated with—and Lord knows, from what she writes, that she didn't approve—it was her best move to send June here until the infatuation wore off."

"Well, go out with this man tomorrow, see what sort of a place he's got, and if everything's all right, let June advise him and help him collect his silly junk. She's nutty over it, anyway. Imagine writing a 500-page book about old chairs and warming pans and cobblers' benches!"

Mrs. Marble and June were driven out to Bayside the next day. June became enthusiastic at once.

"Oh, that's the place—why, I've been dying to go there and look it over, soon as I saw men making repairs and painting it. That doorway must have been designed by Turner, of Belfast, Me. It's all of a hundred and 30 years old!"

June raved more and more. Her aunt approved of the restoration inside.

June's aunt reported to her mother in full about the fortunate circumstances that had made the girl stop mooning over the undesirable young man.

June's mother was quite enlighted.

"June," she wrote, "is the I know, and I was afraid she might rush into matri with this man regardle my objections. I am de that she is so sensible."

Day after day June re progress in furnishing th nial room.

"Mr. Darnton," she re "doesn't pay much atte the other furnishings and arriving but they are lovely."

NEW MURALS PRESENTED TO PUBLIC LIBRARY

We are happy to reproduce for the first time in any newspaper the above murals, which have an interesting history. For years these paintings hung in the Louvre. One day they were accidentally thrown out, and picked up at a bargain by a wealthy American ex-millionaire, who happened to be poking around with his cane. Returning recently to this, his native city, he chanced to meet the janitor of the local library socially. One thing led to another until finally the millionaire offered to give up the murals, providing they hang in the local library. The janitor agreed to place them in his broom closet, where they may now be seen by appointment or accidentally.

Dwight W. Morrow

Life of Lawyer-Financier Ends After Many Deeds Of Public Service, With Great Career Ahead

The nation is shocked and profoundly moved by the sudden death of Dwight W. Morrow.

He was one of the great human assets of America. With many distinguished acts of public service already to his credit, he was regarded by his countrymen as standing at the threshold of even greater public usefulness and wider national influence in the days that lie ahead of us.

Sprung from good but unpretentious stock, Dwight Morrow had made his own career, by diligence and integrity.

His career at the bar in New York was one of steady progress and brought him at a still youthful age to the notice of the leading financial interests of the city.

Abandoning the legal profession for finance, he carried into his work as a banker the poise and balance, and the capacity for reasoned and accurate judgment, which he had learned as a lawyer.

His mind, however, was of a generous and spacious type. He was not content merely to amass money. He had the broad vision of life and of living, and a sense of those elevated and truer values that are realities only to the high intellectual caste.

Success meant more to Dwight Morrow than mere fortune. The wealth that he coveted was the riches of the spirit. The rewards for which he strove have their dwelling place within the breast of man and spring from approving conscience.

His inconspicuous but invaluable service as a trusted adviser of President Coolidge, his Amherst classmate; his brilliant career as American ambassador in Mexico, where he achieved signal success in composing the controversies and irritations which had so long marred the relations between the two republics; his later service as a member of the American delegation to the London naval conference—all are of recent memory.

But it was his decision to stand for electoral office and become a candidate for the United States Senate from the state of New Jersey, that brought home to the country a realizing sense of his potentialities as a commanding national figure.

His courageous declaration in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment introduced a long awaited and refreshing sincerity into our politics. It stamped him at once as a man of true senatorial caliber. His triumphant election by the people of his state therefore came as no surprise.

Now, at the very opening of what was destined to be a great career in the Senate of the nation, he is cut down, in the prime of his mature years and powers.

His death is a grievous loss to the country.

A New Pleasure Resort

Pymatuning Lake, on Which Work Starts Today, Also Will Confer Industrial Benefits.

Ground is being broken today for the construction of an embankment 2,400 feet long and 50 feet high across the Shenango River valley near Jamestown, Pa.

The dam will change Pymatuning Swamp, a morass covering 16,000 acres, mostly in Crawford County, but also partly in Ashtabula County, O., into a lake with 70 miles of shore line, the largest in Pennsylvania.

The people of the Pittsburgh district are thus being provided with a fine new pleasure resort within a few hours' ride of the city—a resort with better facilities than are now available for boating, fishing, camping, hunting and aquatic sports generally.

The recreation value of the new lake will make the strongest appeal.

The industrial benefits are also important. Pymatuning Lake will regulate the stream flow of the Shenango and Beaver rivers. It will serve as a storage reservoir in which to hold back excess water and prevent floods, and will furnish water in time of drought. This will be particularly useful if the Beaver River is made navigable, either independently or as a part of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal.

A number of distinguished men are attending the ceremonies marking the breaking of ground. The beginning of this project is well worthy of their presence.

An Important Profession

Bookkeepers Render Valuable Service in Keeping Check On Public Expenditures.

Seventy-five accountants met in Pittsburgh a few days ago and organized the National Bookkeepers' Association.

Its main purpose is to further the professional education of its members. That bookkeepers need to study to keep up with the requirements of their profession will surprise no one who has even an inkling of the studying that must be done before one can become a certified public accountant.

Frank Wilbur Main told those at the meeting something of the early history of bookkeeping, to show what an old and honored profession it is.

In our complicated civilization it is a most important profession, valuable not only in private commercial business, but also in public affairs.

Pittsburghers will not soon forget that it was the work of accountants in the investigation of the Department of Supplies that paved the way for the municipal housecleaning now being undertaken.

League Court Perils

America, With an Important Question, Would Have to Face a Great European Hazard.

A recent editorial in the Sacramento Bee, an influential California newspaper, points out the French, Polish and Rumanian members of the League Court voted against an Austro-German customs union because their governments opposed it. The Bee continues:

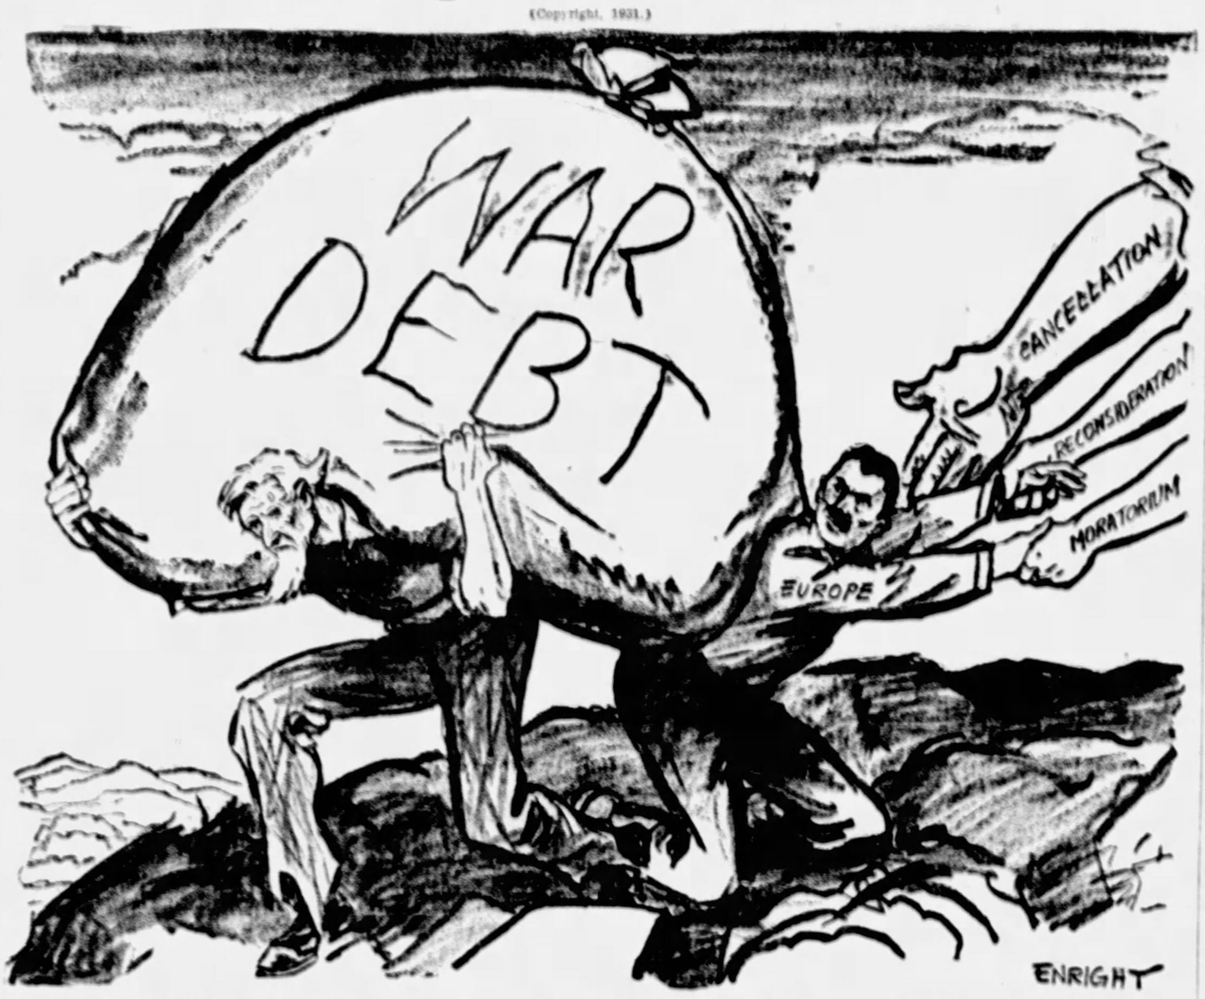
"The Court action in this customs union case should be warning of what goes on there; of how the Court is not so much an impartial judicial body as AN INSTRUMENT FOR GIVING LEGAL COLOR TO THE PROGRAMS AND POLICIES OF THE DOMINATING POWERS OF THE CONTINENT.

"What chance would America have, WITH ONE VOICE, AGAINST THE COMBINED VOTE OF THE EUROPEAN MEMBERS, should she have to submit questions to the Court—such questions, for example, as the Monroe Doctrine!

"If she be wise, she will avoid such a hazard as though it were the plague."

Getting Out from Under

(Copyright, 1931.)



With the aid of the international bankers, the pacifists, and the meddlesome un-American busybodies, who mind everyone's business but their own, Europe hopes to shift the financial burden of the Great War entirely to the over-taxed shoulders of Uncle Sam.

The Moratorium was the first move in the deal to get Europe out from under the war debts. Second will be the Reconsideration of the War Debts, thus paving the way for eventual cancellation, which is the REAL AIM of the internationalists.

If the whole plan succeeds, American taxpayers will pay the whole cost of a war of which they were innocent.

Congress should block the first move, pay no heed to the second and thus prevent the achievement of the third.

These Modern Lovers

Half the middle-aged women in the world appear to be buying new young husbands these days, and the other half shooting up the old ones.

Every man loves some woman more or less. Usually, less—and less—and less.

No amount of avoirdupois ever stifled a woman's longing to be "somebody's little girl."

In the old-fashioned novel the poor little "beggar maid" married Prince Fortunatus and lived happily ever after. In the modern novel the poor young beggar marries the Million Dollar Princess and lives happily until the middle of the third chapter.

Warning a man against anything dangerous, from a drink to a woman, is like telling a small boy on which shelf you've put the fruitcake that he "mustn't touch."

A woman is young until the day when she stops fearing that men will deceive her and begins wishing they WOULD.

Half the men take marriage so seriously that no woman can DRAG them into it—and the other half take it so lightly that no woman can KEEP them in it.

A woman is not really fat until she begins spending her days trying to spot other women who are fatter than she is!

The average woman doesn't feel that she has had her share of thrills unless she has been "just saved" from folly or temptation, two or three times.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

An indignant husband wants to know why women make such a fuss over those fool crooners. There's his wife—she's 46 and ought to have sense—yet she'll sit all evening listening to that "mushing blat and actually sniffling over it"—why?

I'm thinking of Emily Wilson. Emily's one of those colorless, ineffectual little creatures that successful men accumulate before they know what it's all about. She seems lost in the fine house which wealth has built about her, with the prospering years. And even more lost beside big, busy Fred. Does he even notice she's there? Probably not, he's so taken with many outside interests, outside friends.

Yet he'd probably grieve over her if she went. Or, at least, he'd grieve over the memory of what they had once. Someone who knew them when they were young, tells me that Fred was crazy over Emily when they were first married. He was just starting his practice then—they were very poor, but wonderfully happy. He'd bring her a cheap, little bunch of flowers every Saturday night or a box of chocolates. She'd have surprises for him. Strawberry shortcake—out of season. Or a necktie, made from an old silk gown. He'd make a great fuss over the surprises—and her foolish, fond little face would grow bright and quivery with delight.

On Sundays they'd go somewhere for a picnic. Cheap, street car trips—but her eyes would be starry as she clung to his arm and he'd strut like a couple of Napoleons.

Joy as simple as that couldn't last, of course. With his intelligence he was bound to forge ahead, where she couldn't follow. By their sixth anniversary, she was fading, he was yawning. But he was kind—considering. Never even suggested a divorce. Never cheated. He realized she had done the best she could. And, in her way, she was still a comfortable habit. So he stuck—but with each year he grew more indifferent. No more boquets Saturday nights. No more picnics Sunday. Didn't even notice, any more, when she fixed a surprise—

At first she tried to do something about it, but she soon gave up. It was too much for her. Everything was too much for her. Life would have licked her, any way. It always does—women like that.

So they've gone on together. Married 14 years now. She's 37 . . . he's 45. One baby, died at birth. Some people say Emily has done well for herself. Plenty of money—no worries—a kind husband who will give her anything she asks. Yet . . .

All day she drifts around the big, handsome house. The days are curiously empty. She isn't much for company or reading. Never was. But there used to be so much to do for Fred. Now there's—nothing.

Lately she's gotten into the habit of spending most of her time before the radio. She knows all the singers and announcers—they've become a sort of family. She has made pictures to herself of how they look. Some of them, she is sure, are not very happy. Particularly the crooners. They're big, strong men—of course. But somehow they seem lonely, too. Longing for something—trying to tell her about it—singing just for her. For hours she sits listening—

Once her husband, passing, caught her at it. Laughed and teased her. She didn't answer. Just gave him a strange look—flushed painfully. But he didn't notice.

After he had gone, she went on sitting there—a small, quiet shadow in the big, dim room. A little, lonely shadow sitting alone with a man's vibrant, caressing voice.

"Sweet and lovely
"Sweeter than the roses in May,
"Sweet and lovely,
"Heaven must have sent her my way—"

The voice went on and on. Her eyes closed . . . her hands moved timidly . . . her foolish, faded face grew warm and quivery with delight. Unconsciously she leaned forward . . . a little, lonely figure leaning, once more, against a man's caressing strength.

Why is a crooner? What's why. And if I were an "indignant husband" it might make me feel like thirty cents.

Scientific Methods in Crime Reduction

By Archibald Henderson

The future age is to be an age of science. It is a mistake to call this the age of science; for in the larger affairs of social justice, universal education and human solidarity, we have only just begun to utilize the findings of science. One of the first things we are discovering is that science, in its completeness, thoroughness and detail, is laborious and expensive in application. Just as it takes years to learn enough basic science to acquire facility in research, so it takes years to apply adequately, scientific procedure and discipline to the larger social problems.

Consider, for example, the problem of the rehabilitation of criminals. There is virtue in the effort to restore men, who have broken the laws of the land, to civil life and give them an opportunity to live worthy, lawabiding lives. The great problem is: how is it to be done? How are to be obtained the elaborate data requisite for judging the effects and results of this promising humanitarian experiment? How are the large sums necessary to effect this rehabilitation to be obtained? Will it pay the state to carry out these experiments on a large scale?

A most interesting and promising beginning has been made in this line by Hinton G. Clabaugh, chairman of the Parole Board of Illinois. As narrated by Mayer and Howe, in Steps in the Dark, it makes a most inspiring story. It is one of these steps in the dark which clearly leads toward the light.

Clabaugh, who had devoted his life to the rehabilitation of criminals, decided to call applied science to his aid. At his request, to the institutions concerned, three men were appointed by the president in each case: Andrew S. Bruce, of Northwestern University; Albert J. Harno, of the University of Illinois, and Ernest W. Burgess, of the University of Chicago. This committee made a year's survey of the five penal and reformatory institutions in Illinois, together with a thorough analysis of criminal records, and, when available, the life records of 3,000 men who had been paroled.

The findings were extremely interesting. It was discovered that parole had proved appreciably beneficial to society by transforming bad men into good. The principal handicap is always lack of useful and authentic information. The scientists concentrated upon 21 phases of the man's life-history, his social background, his personality type, his criminal and prison career. It was shown that 75 per cent of the 3,000 "made good"—i. e. did not violate their parole. Out of this 75 per cent 10 per cent later on were apprehended for new offenses. The parole system proved to be 65 per cent efficient.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

What sort of a fellow are you in a poker game?

Do you lose sight of friendship even when you are playing with your best friends?

There is such a thing as a "friendly poker game," but the ante and the limit must be mighty small if the game is to remain in the friendly class.

Even then it loses some of its so-called friendliness if one player wins most of the money and another is the biggest loser.

Are you the sort of player who, being on the right side of a considerable amount and holding what you have a right to expect to be a winning hand, raises the bid a little at a time in order to keep a losing player betting?

He is a friend of yours and you think he has little chance of beating you, but still you don't call him to prevent him from losing more money.

"Penny ante or higher," says an old player, "there is no such thing as a friendly poker game."

"When a fellow goes into a poker game he goes in to win whether it be the so-called friendly game or not," says another.

Then there is the matter of borrowed money.

Do you always pay such debts.

Too many fellows feel that a poker debt should not be paid until the amount is won in another game. Are you this sort?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Because

I love you, without doubt, because
I love the sun;
And to my mind the light and you
Are seen as one.

The sunlight on a palace wall
Is not more bright
Than when it rests where poverty
Has placed its blight.

And so with you when living seems
Too vexed and grave,
Still through its lack as through its joy
Your heart is brave.

Your love as fondly, truly rests
On lives obscure
As on those favored ones who go
In ways secure.

I love you, without doubt, because
I love the sun,
And to my mind the sunlight's glow
And you are one.

Text for Today He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty—Psalms, xci:1.

(Text for today is suggested by the Rev. J. Paul Graham, pastor, Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, Greentree.)

What's Wrong With Young People Today?

NOTHING, If This Boy Is a Sample.

JACK CHAPMAN.

You are interested in this fine young American, who thinks no more of stepping into a plane and flying solo than you do of stepping into an automobile.

He was 11 years old on January 22. He made his first air trip at the age of 4.

He had seven and a half hours of flying instruction before he tried his own wings.

He soloed twice recently at Suffolk Airport, West Hampton, L. I., staying up more than 10 minutes each time.

His takeoffs and landings were perfect.

Yourg Mr. Chapman is modest. He sees nothing unusual about flying a plane himself. The fact that he is the youngest human being that ever soloed does not strike him as remarkable. He says he would rather fly to California than to spell it. It is easier, he believes, to fly than to spell.

Middle-aged persons, who remember when flight was called a crazy dream, find much to think about in this 11-year-old boy's achievement. It reminds them that the world has moved farther ahead in the last 30 years than it did in the preceding 300.

They also find here an answer to their question, "What's wrong with the young people today?"

The answer, of course, is "Nothing at all." Young people today have more intelligence, imagination and NERVE than their fathers and grandfathers ever thought of having.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Ladies living lightly have found the usual crop of White Way wastrels exhausted. Luxury lads of the Flash Era now find it difficult to pay rent on the high-up and all the way back hall room. Their extravagances depended entirely upon a rising market.

Thus have many cloistered cuties suddenly turned to rich Chinese and Japanese spenders. The recent disappearance of a wealthy Jap and news he lavished a quarter million on a platinum temptress was only made conspicuous because of ensuing thick headlines.

Instead of an isolated liason, it was only one of many. There is a certain block in the West Seventies ramparted with ornate apartment houses and filled with lustrous nests for those dizzy damozels skimming like wild geese over the gray marshes of life.

While Chinese are in the minority in such attachments, there are quite a number known to elevator boys, with behind-the-back grins, as "The Mysterious Mr. Wu." The Chinese has a firmer grip on his purse strings and is not so inclined to cut capers.

But the play-boy Jap is a Good Time Charlie. His preference is almost solely for bright blondes, a choice said to have resulted in such a sudden switch from henna to platinum among the Broadway dolls who live in the eternality of their now.

There are obscure restaurants with booths that for a time catered to such companionships but lately the seclusion has been dropped. The "ghost girls" are seen in public places—the theater, smart cafe and strolling along the various promenades.

Incidentally, I am told the only sales of importance in high class jewelry establishments this summer were to Orientals for Occidental inamoratas. And I like the story of the swacked maid in a speakeasy, who, airing a current headache, cried: "I'm sick of tightwads. What I crave is a nice Yellow Peril."

There is to me a dull charm about Central Park when leaves fall and broad meadows become acres of withered tuft. A bench on one of the rocky outcrops behind a circle of bushes becomes a bastion of meditation. Yonder is the breathless skyline—the ghostly radiana spire that is Pierre's, the gilt pinnacle of the Sherry-Netherlands, the frosty facade of the Savoy and the splash of the Plaza's green roof. It's a swell perch to think up pieces one never writes.
